World Dairy Expo Names Bupp 'Dairy Woman Of The Year'

LOU ANN GOOD

SEVEN VALLEYS (York Co.) — Leroy Bupp hit paydirt when he took a risk and married a teenage bride from a non-farm background. That bride turned out to be a hard-working dairy farmer who has been named 1993 Dairy Woman of the Year by World Dairy Expo.

This isn't a superficial title, but one that Joyce Bupp has earned by blood, sweat, and tears for her exceptional achievements, participation, and leadership in dairy and community activites.

To our readers, Joyce is probably best known for her weekly column, "On Being a Farm Wife And Other Hazards." These weekly columns offer personal glimpses into everyday happenings on the farm.

In person, Joyce is just as warm, friendly, and optimistic as her col-

Conservation Commission Appoints Nutrient Management Advisory Board

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Another piece in the basic structure of the state's nutrient management law was added last week as the State Conservation Commission approved nominations to the Nutrient Management Advisory Board.

The approval of the board members is a major step in the creation of a nutrient management regulatory bureaucracy. The nutrient management law, signed by Gov. Robert Casey just prior to his historic heart and lungs transplant, went into effect July 19.

Under the law, the State Conservation Commission, chaired by the secretary of the Department of Environmental Resources, is to promulagate specific regulations covering the dispersal and flow of nutrients, effectively so as to not exceed levels that are toxic to an existing healthy waterway ecology.

Although intensive, commercial livestock production has been the target group of certain political groups, it is not the entirety of the businesses which are to be affected. Under the nutrient management law, all non-point sources of nutrients are to eventually be researched and analyzed for possible impact to a waterway (surface or groundwater).

In the future, it is possible that golf courses, residential areas, feedstuff storage areas, and commercial crop growers who apply commercial fertilizer, as well as other businesses as research indicates, may be affected.

There are 15 members on the board who are to consist of:

- five active commercial farm owners or operators representing the livestock, swine, meat poultry, egg poultry and dairy industry nominated by statewide general farm organizations;
- one veterinary nutrition specialist;
- one representative from the fertilizer industry;
- one representative of commerical agricultural lenders;
- one representative of local government;

Hot Weather, Ornery Steers Challenge Lebanon Beef Show Exhibitors

ANDY ANDREWS

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Jason Shirk's 1,350-pound Simmental/Angus cross, full brother to last year's reserve champion steer, according to Jason, won supreme champion beef on Tuesday at the Lebanon Fair.

Jason, 11, son of Dawn Shirk and Tom Arnold, Rexmont, picked up the championship from the heavyweight class. He said his grandfather, Leon Arnold, helped him pick the steer. This is Jason's fourth year showing steers at the fair.

Reserve champion went to an 1,105-pound Simmental/Hereford cross, shown by Nathan Spatz, 11, son of Brian and Joanne Spatz, Lebanon. Nathan is a fifth grader at New Covenant Christian School. The steer, from the lightweight division, was purchased at the Dutch Country Calf Sale in October.

Both steers were 4-H projects.

With many exhibitors sweaty and disheveled, particularly during the showmanship portion of the show from dealing with sweltering heat and ornery, unruly steers, the show judge, Dr. Erskine Cash, Centre Hall, congratulated the exhibitors for doing the best they could under the conditions. The steer shown by Shirk, said Cash, was "representative of the total industry, not a single endpoint in the industry." He said it had lots of rib, depth of rib, and more body without being "wastey."

Soaked with sweat, this year's champion 4-H showman dealt with an ornery Chianina cross that at times looked like would put the champion out of the competition. But Cash recognized what the exhibitors were dealing with in the

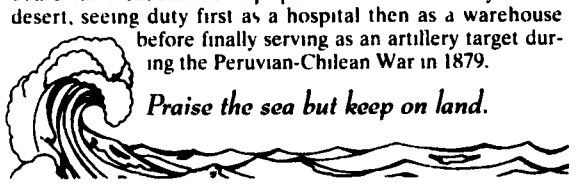
The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With

AUGUST 2-8, 1993

FULL GREEN CORN MOON, AUGUST 2.

TSUNAMI

Tsunami, Japanese for "large waves in harbors," is the correct term for what most of us erroneously refer to as "tidal waves." On August 8, 1868, an earthquake in Chile created a dramatic tsunami. The visiting U.S.S. Wateree was anchored offshore when the monster wave hit. As the crew of 234 clung to their lifelines, the wave (variously reported as 55 to 70 feet high) swept over the ship. Then the Wateree rose to the surface and rode the crest three miles up the coast and two miles inland before being deposited in a desert. Amazingly, all on board survived, but the ship spent the rest of her days in the desert, seeing duty first as a hospital then as a warehouse before finally serving as an artillery target during the Peruvian-Chilean War in 1879.



Praise the sea but keep on land.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Rice in the salt shaker will help keep moisture out.

EARTHWISE

Have the kids reached that point in the summer where there's "nothing to do"? Try getting them started on some "eco-projects." The book, Save Our Planet, 52 Easy Things Kids Can Do Now, by Susan A. Levine, Parachute Press, Inc., has great ideas like Calculating your family's Daily Garbage Total, becoming a Drip Detective, or doing the Wrap Rap with friends. The ideas are designed to be fun and raise kids' (and parents') awareness. Who knows, maybe they'll even start turning off the lights!

SUMMERTIME BREAKFAST SHAKE

1 cup vanilla lowfat yogurt
1/4 cup orange juice
2 ice cubes

The Old Farmer's Weather Forecast

OPINION

Fun For Farm Families

We're in the middle of the fair season again with all the excitement for rural people these local, county and state fair's bring. The official Pennsylvania Fairs booklet list 133 fair events. And neighboring states have their share of fairs too.

Some fairs aren't very agricultural any more. The midway has eaten up the agricultural exhibits. But other fairs have some ag displays and some have only agricultural exhibits and no midway.

At the fairs where agriculture plays a part, the opportunity to showcase the farmer's way of life to urban neighbors is great. Not only is it a place for farm families to win prizes with livestock, produce and crafts, it is a place to show the public where the food comes from in the grocery store. With all the public ignorance about farming, more should be done at the agricultural exhibits at every fair to educate consumers about food production and food safety. Ag fairs are not just fun for farm families. Ag fairs can help spread the message that consumers are blessed with abundant food supplies because farm families farm.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Manage Calf Scours

Calf scours are a result of a combination of noninfectious factors and infectious microorganisms.

Controlling the problem takes more than giving shots and pills. Proper management and medical treatment are necessary to prevent and treat the disease.

Calf scour prevention has to be a year-round effort. Some management ideas include:

- Before the calf hits the ground, you may help prevent problems by making sure the herd receives adequate nutrition.
- Replacement heifers must receive sufficient feed energy for maintenance as well as growth. Failure to meet energy needs will result in a weak calf at birth and delayed return to estrus.
- The newborn calf should have a dry and clean place.
- Be concerned with sanitation. Confined areas may become wet from accumulated manure and urine.
- Perhaps the most important requirement for newborn calves is they receive adequate colostrum early in life. A calf should receive one to two quarts of colostrum during the first two to four hours after birth to provide disease protection.

To Move Farm Equipment Safely

If you drive farm equipment on public roads, make sure it is properly lighted and marked so other road users may see and identify it as a slow-moving in time to avoid collision.

Make sure your farm equipment has the lighting, reflectors, and slow-moving vehicle identification. Keep lights and reflectors clean. Replace burned out bulbs and lamps promptly.

Use your flashing lights when you travel on a public road. If possible, avoid travel during bad weather and at night. Also, avoid busy highways during peak travel or rush hours.

If possible, move wide equipment during the day and when traffic volume is relatively low. Use an escort car or a lookout to help you on blind curves or bridges.

Obey all traffic laws. Also, be courteous to other drivers.

To Fill Silos Safely

Few farm operations are as dangerous as filling a silo. Knowing how to handle these hazards will let you fill your silo safely.

Preparation for silo filling includes raising the unloader to the top of the structure. Do this on a calm, dry day to reduce the risk of slips and falls. Make sure all cables, wires, pulleys, and connections are anchored and working properly before you start.

Never enter the silo while the unloader is being raised. Moving machine parts pose the greatest risk during silo filling.

Never step over PTO shafts. Instead, walk around tractors and wagons. To prevent getting snagged, keep all protective machinery shields in place, wear comfortable but close-fitting clothing, and keep long hair tied up or under a hat.

If a self-unloading wagon becomes clogged, disengage the PTO and stop the tractor. PTOs can accidently slip into gear, so always stop the engine.

Blower accidents are most likely when the machine plugs up. If this happens, turn off the blower, cut the power, and make sure the fan blades have stopped turning before you try to clear the machine.

Silo blowers, unloading wagons, and the tractors that power them are loud enough to cause noise induced hearing loss. Workers should wear hearing protection.

Keep children and other bystanders out of the silo filling area. They not only but themselves at risk but also may distract the machine operator, who needs to pay strict attention to the task at hand.

Farm Forum

Dear Editor,

Contrary to what some dairy leaders are saying, the majority of dairy farmers do know the type of dairy plan they support.

And while a co-op spokesman may severely question the ability and intelligence of the majority of dairy farmers to make sound and unified decisions on dairy policies; one only has to travel out onto several dairy farms and you soon get the picture where dairy farmers are coming from.

Continually, I visit with dairy farmers in Pennsylvania and New York. It doesn't matter if the producers ship milk to a dairy co-op or to a private handler; nearly 90% of them want a pricing change based on the average cost of production, tempered with a supply management program, preferably a two tier program.

National milk producers spokespeople, and some of their member cooperatives continually submit articles to the news media indicating the dairy farmers that support two tier pricing are crying out for more and more government help, plus they say the two tier programs run up additional costs to the total dairy programs.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Let's get it straight. The supporters of a true two tier prog-

WHEN YOU WERE DEAD!
August 1, 1993

Background Scripture:
Ephesians 1:15-2:10, 3:14-19.
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 1:3-14.

A millennial branch of Christianity used to proclaim: "millions now living will never see death!" I recall someone commenting: "The real tragedy is that millions are "dead" who have never really been alive!"

A friend of ours is a patient in a nursing home. The news media calls her a "vegetable," suggesting that although her physical body is alive, her mind and psyche are not. We live in a day when it is increasingly difficult to determine when biological life is over. Resuscitation brings back to life many who have been pronounced clinically "dead." We used to think that when the heart stopped beating and/or all respiration ended, that was the end of life. Not any longer.

Quite apart from these medical concerns is the question of the life of the spirit. Paul indicates that it is quite possible to be "spiritually dead" while the body is still alive: "And you he made alive, when you were dead through the trespasses and sins in which you once walked..." (2:1). It is quite possible to have all the vital signs of physical life and still be dead in the midst of life.

VITAL SIGNS

To be sure, this is a figure of speech, but it is also more. There is a sense in which we can be quite spiritually "dead" despite a healthy physical body. Our bodies may be animated with the life force, but our spirits can be so deadened that there is really no life in us. Moving a finger, a hand, or a foot doesn't prove that you are alive! It is said that when Mrs. Dorothy Parker was told that President Calvin Coolidge passed away, she responded with: "How can they tell?" With some people it is very difficult.

Researchers estimate that as many as one out of every twenty persons has a near-death experience — when the physical body ceases to function, but is resuscitated. But I wonder how many people have near-life experiences, getting close to being really alive, but never making it? Important as life after death is, so is life before death.

For some people it is a matter of dying so slowly that they are scarcely aware of it. Poet Stephen Vincent Benet wrote: "Life is not lost by dying! Life is lost minute by minute, day by dragging day, in all the thousand, small uncaring ways." And Robert D. Abraham, writing in The Saturday Evening Post, said much the same thing:

For some men die by shrapnel
And some go down in flames,
But most men perish inch by inch
In play at little games.

INCH BY INCH

Paul says that it is sin that has the power to kill the spirit while the body is still alive. Worst of all, this sin attracts us because it seems to promise the very fullness of life it takes away from us. "Among these we all once lived in the passions of our flesh, following the desires of body and mind..." (2:3).

But the good news is that, "...God, who is rich in mercy, out of the great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead through our trespasses, made us alive together with Christ... and raised us up with him..." (2:4-6a). In other words, once we recognize that we are "dead," we can turn from our trespasses, accept the grace of God, and experience the resurrecting new life offered us in Christ. From that new relationship comes the life for which we were born: "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand, that we should walk in them" (2:10).

That old farmers' saying puts it plainly: "Live as though you would die tonight. Farm as though you would live forever."

Nutrient Management Advisory Board

• one representative of academia who shall be an agronomist or plant scientist faculty member of the school of agriculture of a Pennsylvania college or university;

• one hydrologist.

• two citizen representatives who are not farmers;

• and one environmental representative.

Additionally, the law states that the representatives "shall have sufficient knowledge, experience or familiarity with agronomic or nutrient management practices" and that they be residents of the state.

The board members aren't paid, but are reimbursed for "reasonable and necessary" expenses.

A majority board constitutes a quorum and a simple majority vote rules.

The board is to review and comment on all commission regulations and the commission can not act on any regulations without first consulting the board.

Although the eventual terms of office for all appointed is to be three years, the initial term length has been staggered, so that continuity is maintained to a degree so as to not affect the stability of the board.

Also, at the discretion of the State Conservation Commission, an individual may be appointed to successive terms, but can not serve more than two 3-year terms.

Nominations for seats on the board are to come from "statewide general farm organizations," according to the law. In Pennsylvania, those organizations currently widely recognized as being statewide general farm organizations include, but are not limited to, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (Farmer's Association), the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, and the Pennsylvania State Grange.

The five agricultural producer representatives named to the board, the industry they represent and their terms of office were: Irk A. McConnell, of Washington County, livestock producer, 1 year; Dennis Zimmerman, Snyder County, swine producer, 2 years; Donald Bollinger, Lebanon County, meat poultry producer, 3 years; Ronald Meck, Lancaster County, egg poultry producer, 1 year; and Joel Rotz, Franklin County, dairy producer, 2 years.

Others representing agricultural interests include Charles Ramberg Jr., University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, veterinary nutrition specialist, 3 years; George Robinson, Snyder County, feed industry official, 1 year; Bobby Jones, Union County, agriculture lender official, 3 years; William Brubaker, Lancaster County, fertilizer industry representative, 2 years; and Lawrence Hepner Jr., Delaware Valley College, plant science or agronomy representative, 1 year.

Those board members considered to be environmental protectionists include Lamonte Garber, Lancaster County, environmentalist, 2 years; and Jerrald Hollowell, Susquehanna River Basin Commission, hydrologist, 2 years.

Three others with general public interests include Mary Lehman, of Cumberland County, a nonfarmer, 3 years; William Ebel, of Lancaster County, nonfarmer, 1 year; and Eugene Billhime, of Montour County, representing local government, for 3 years.

While the advisory board has been established, the state Department of Agriculture is charged with creating a nutrient management certification program, whereby successful applicants are to then be qualified to draft and approve nutrient management plans.

Work on creating a certification program has been progressing, according to Gene Schenck, PDA press secretary. He said that, although the law allows for the department to take up to two years to create the program, "The interim certification program will be in place by October."

According to Schenck, the program is being based on agency past experience in the field.

Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff said that he is pleased with the progress being made.

"The advisory board ... is something we worked very hard to obtain," he said.

"Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act resulted from a great deal of give and take between varying interests and organizations. The compromise that resulted has a number of benefits for the farmers who will be affected," Wolff said.

"Number one, the act provides for uniform requirements for all farmers in the commonwealth so that a local entity can't pass stricter measures. This version also has a reasonable time frame and gives farmers more input."

Use Caution Converting To Beef Facility

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Dairy farmers who want to pursue Holstein beef production as a sideline should proceed with caution before renovating that old building on their farm to raise bull calves.

"Most people overestimate the value of an existing building and underestimate the cost of renovating it for an alternative use," said Dr. Robert Graves, professor of agricultural engineering in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Evaluating a building comes down to asking lots of questions and answering them honestly."

An honest evaluation is especially important because animals are involved. "We shouldn't subject animals to poor conditions that exist in many converted buildings," Graves says. "You may think it will be easy to alter an existing building to raise bull calves, but inadequate remodeled facilties can quickly devour profits.

"Unfortunately, the long-term cost of lost animal productivity is almost never considered," Graves said. "You must be sure that the animals' basic needs — fresh air, adequate feed space, clean resting areas and frost-free water — can be met easily in your existing building."

Decide what your requirements are for raising animals before evaluating a building, Graves advised. "Once you know what your needs are in terms of space, ventilation and feed, and manure handling, you can begin."

The first thing to look at is the building's location. "Where is it in relation to roads, property lines, wet areas and other buildings?" Graves said. "Will your neighbors complain about odors or noise? And what about local codes or ordinances that affect using the building for livestock?"

Adequate space and clearance are vital for any livestock facility. "Is there enough room for the number of animals you want?" Graves asked. "Will you be able to easily feed and observe your animals? What about manure disposal? Are the doors adequate and ceilings high enough to allow machinery access?"

Access to utilities such as electricity and water must be examined. "Frost-free water is a basic requirement for beef cattle," Graves said. "Breaking up floors and going through foundations to install water lines can be very expensive, and exposed lines always will be threatened by freezing." The building's structural soundness and maintenance requirements also must be carefully considered.

"Finally, ask yourself how much you'd pay for the building if you didn't own it," Graves said. "When you think about writing out a check to someone else, it's amazing how the list of things wrong with the building will grow."

When you've tallied the estimated renovation costs, compare the sum to the cost of a new facility. "If the projected cost of remodeling is more than two-thirds or three-fourths of a new facility, the new facility might be a better option," Graves said. "Hidden costs can make renovating an old building more expensive than building a new one."

More information about evaluating existing farm buildings and other aspects of beef production can be found in "Holstein Beef Production," a proceedings containing 28 papers presented at the Holstein Beef Production National Symposium in Harrisburg in February. It is available for $12 from your Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Ice Cream Shouldn't Freeze Your Budget

Ice cream that costs $2.00 a half gallon may please your family just as much as a kind costing $3.00 or more. Trained dairy product evaluators in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences have found that most of the 250 samples of vanilla ice cream they evaluate each year are of high quality — no matter what their price.

"Some of the economy brands stack up well next to their more expensive counterparts," said Sidney E. Barnard, a Penn State professor of food science who supervises the judging. "Only about 10 percent of the samples have pronounced body or texture defects, such as weak, coarse or icy texture. The majority of the brands have good to excellent body and texture."

Each year Americans spend $5.2 billion on an estimated 775 million gallons of ice cream, with the average price of a half gallon about $2.50. While the majority of brands taste good, there are valid reasons why some cost more than others, said Barnard.

"Premium brands are composed of more expensive ingredients," he said. "Manufacturers must pass the cost on to consumers.

"For example, a premium brand of vanilla will have pure vanilla as an ingredient, while an economy brand will be flavored with artificial vanilla. Manufacturers pay only a few dollars for a gallon of artificial vanilla flavor, but they pay $60 or more for a gallon of pure vanilla."

The least expensive brands also use fewer fruits and nuts, said Barnard. "If you open a half gallon of an economy brand and a premium brand, cut across the blocks on a diagonal, and compare them, you'll see the distribution of fruits and nuts varies greatly."

Economy brands also are composed of more air. "There has to be some air in ice cream, otherwise it would be rock hard," said Barnard. "But premium products might have 20 percent air, whereas economy brands can have up to 50 percent." Barnard said that the smooth texture we look for in ice cream is the result of proper handling. When ice cream partially melts and refreezes, it forms ice crystals, which causes a coarse or icy texture.

Ice cream must be stored in a freezer set for 0 degrees Fahrenheit or below. The freezer must not have fluctuating temperatures. If not consumed within two weeks, hold the ice cream at minus 20 degree Fahrenheit or below to prevent an icy texture from forming.

"No matter what consumers pay for a half gallon," said Barnard, "they can spoil the texture of the product by letting it sit too long in the car or on the counter before they return it to a freezer."

Joyce Bupp Named Dairy Woman Of The Year

umns portray. From 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., Joyce attacks a whirlwind of duties, from milking, feeding calves, gardening, and pulling weeds in her profuse flower beds surrounding their York County farm.

The Bupps milk 200 registered cows, raise their own replacements, and farm about 800 acres, of which 240 are owned by them.

While Leroy handles the mating and breeding, Joyce is in charge of calf feeding, naming, intermediate heifer raising, and registration. She also assists the vet in reproductive exams, maintains books, and records for the farm operation and milks seven days a week.

Well, almost seven days a week. Several days a month she flies all over the country as an educator and speaker for ag concerns, and she attends meetings as board member of Dairymen, Inc., and vice president of the Middle Atlantic Division Board of Dairymen Inc. She holds the distinction of being the first and only woman serving on the Dairymen corporate board.

Leroy, the veteran dairy farmer, is often introduced as "Mr. Joyce Bupp." His good-natured smile confirms that he is not intimidated, but quite proud of his wife, and has earned his wife's assessment that "he is wonderfully supportive of all I do."

He believes in the adage that non-farm women make better farmers because they don't know what they are getting into and don't have any bad habits to unlearn.

Perhaps Joyce did not have any bad habits to unlearn, but she did have a preview of what farm life would be like during their dating years. On one date, the couple needed to skip a New Year's Eve party to deliver a litter of piglets. And, during their courtship, she knew that Leroy rarely had time to eat and sleep properly as he rushed between chores on his family's farm and on the one he purchased while only a high school senior, and then squeezed in a few hours to date her.

The couple decided time could be gained by getting married so they pushed up their wedding date and married about seven months after high school graduation. Joyce maintained her office job for two years after their marriage, but when an aunt needed to come to help Leroy with farm chores one day, Joyce decided it was time to make the farm her career.

Joyce loves the cows, the cow shows, and the fieldwork. Having babies barely slowed down Joyce's busy lifestyle, because she fed calves right up until the time she went to deliver her babies and quickly resumed her chores soon after.

Daughter Patricia is 24 years old, married, and a college professor in Oregon. Son Richard, now 21, is a student at Penn State University.

While the children were growing up, their parents became 4-H leaders, carted the children to shows, games, and activities. As the 4-H dairy bowl coach, Joyce saw her team win the state title and go on to place third in the nation. Leroy was dairy club leader and still helps out occasionally.

In 1976, Joyce said that she "fell into writing." That was the year that the American Farm Bureau sponsored an essay contest for the bicentennial celebration. Joyce entered — her first written piece ever — and won a trip to Hawaii.

The view from the Bupps' back porch overlooks the patio, pool, ponds, and meadow.

Not long after that, Joyce was asked to be a correspondent for Lancaster Farming. Several months later, she began her weekly column, which was then picked up by the "York Dispatch" newspaper. She also has had numerous articles and features published by Lancaster Farming, Holstein World, and Hoard's Dairyman.

She has never taken a writing course or had any journalistic training.

Joyce estimates that she has written 1,000 columns and has never used the same one twice. While she may occassionally have a bout with writers' block, she said of the weekly deadline, "Something always pops up. All farm wives have the same kind of things happening to them — those normal, routine, crazy, frustrating things that happen on the farm."

Though it may be normal, everyday things, it's Joyce's humor and perspective in recounting them make her column extremely popular. As one reader put it — the column makes everyone feel like Joyce is their next-door neighbor even if they've never met.

As a speaker and educator for agriculture, Joyce also excells. She speaks to many groups such as Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, Maryland Farm Bureau, National Institute Of Cooperatives, and the Maryland Institute of Cooperatives.

It was easier for Joyce to attend off-farm events several years ago than it is now because the children could assume her chores. Now that the children are grown up and away from the home, the Bupps try to keep labor costs down, which means that Joyce declines many invitations to speak.

"Farming duties are my number one priority," she said.

Bupplynn Dairy Farms' best known cow is Beshore Rotate Bupplynn Jody, one of the most sought-after flush cows in the Holstein Breed. The farm consistenly breeds a large amount of Very Good and several Excellent cows. It is known for its stylish uddered Holstein bloodlines. The Bupps have exhitited and sold at local, state, and national shows and sales in addition to exporting several to foreign countries.

The Bupp's barn is one-of-a-kind, according to Joyce. It was designed for show animals when they were in their heyday years of showing. It's a herringbone-stall barn with raised stalls about 11-inches above alley and angled for easy access for milking. Although the stall barn requires more labor than a milking parlor, the advantage is that it allows better cow care. The cows are tamer because of the personal contact of needing to tie and let them loose each day.

The Bupps put a lot of stock in breeding for cow temperament. They do not tolerate wild cows.

Since both Leroy and Joyce love dairy shows, it is especially painful to cut down on them, but the costs of hiring labor while showing is not cost effective.

They do continue county shows and are pleased with the premier breeder and exhibitor awards garnered there.

Joyce is also a township auditor, Sunday School teacher at Hametown Lutheran Church, and book reviewer for Christian Herald Book Club.

She is already at work as the chairperson of the booklet committee for the 1995 National Holstein Association Convention, to be held in Pittsburgh.

For all who read Joyce's column, they know that she may lament the government's paper overload, rising costs, poor pay, and low prices, but she always ends up with a positive upbeat message.

"How can I do otherwise?" she said. "I love my job. It may not pay the best, but I look at my blessings."

Many years ago, Joyce's mother told her: "At least if you are marrying a farmer, you'll never go hungry."

And, she has had plenty to eat regardless of drought or wet seasons.

Recently, the Bupps lost three of their best cows from the heat, and the rain has been sparse. But Joyce said, "I don't worry as much as I used to about weather and other things that I can't control, because with faith everything always works out."

She said that we have a choice to work with what we have and to (Turn to Page A21)

Experimenting with greenhouse plant is therapy for Joyce.

Joyce gathers some gladiolas, which bloom profusely despite little rain.

Dairy Woman of the Year Joyce Bupp co-manages a 420-head registered Holstein dairy farm, is a prolific writer and speaker for agriculture concerns, and a board member for Dairymen, Inc., and the Middle Atlantic Division's board of directors.

Stephanie Wagner Shows Third Lebanon Supreme Dairy Animal

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Stephanie Wagner, daughter of Vince and Julie Wagner, Myerstown, on Tuesday took home the trophy for showing the supreme dairy animal at the Lebanon Area Fair. It was her third supreme title and the second in a row.

The Lebanon Area Fair was held this week with youth and open dairy shows being held Tuesday for all breeds, except for Holsteins. The Holstein open class show was held yesterday, past newspaper deadline.

The competition for supreme dairy animal is the final event of the day, held among the FFA and 4-H contestants who showed grand champion animals in the five respective dairy breeds.

There is a maximum of 10 animals that can be in the ring for the final selection. On Tuesday there were seven grand champions, since there were no FFA entries in three of the colored breeds.

Wagner not only took home the top trophy for her aged cow, Ju-Vindale Tradition Bobbie, born September 1984, but she also won the fair's Best Bred and Owned competition, winning a savings bond from Lebanon Agway Inc.

The Best Bred and Owned competition is perhaps the most demanding for the youth since it is based on a compiliation of points derived from several efforts — the bred and owned 4-H project animal itself, the project book, showmanship and fitting.

The maximum points possible is 50, broken down to 20 for the project book, and 10 points each for the other three areas.

Stephanie won with 48 points, edging out Jesse Bomgardner who had 47.5 points, and Kevin Bomgardner with 47 points.

Each received a savings bond from Agway.

Stephanie said her aged cow, dam to Wagner's last year supreme champion, "has always done well by me. I don't know what else to say. I'm very, very happy."

The final two competitions were held Tuesday evening and judged by Holstein judge David Castrogiavanni, of Montrose, who also farms more than 500 acres and milk 250 registered Holsteins.

"This was a big show and the qualify ran real deep. The big thing is the quality running real deep at the show. It's not that commone at county 4-H shows to have classes with more than 30 entries," he said. "Those are really big classes. There may be one or two other counties with (show of a similar stature), but it is very atypical," Castrogiavanni said.

The judge also commented on the new facilities at the Lebanon fairgrounds. "It is by far the nicest (show facility) I ever judged at."

The colored breed shows were judged by John Morris.

Wagner's Holstein was also 4-H grand champion of the Hosltein show followed by reserve grand champion Loving Meadows Lover Girl, shown by Jay Bomgardner, of Ono.

The FFA grand champion Holstein was 4-year-old Loving Meadows Persimmon, bred, owned and shown by Kevin Bomgardner, also of Ono. The FFA reserve grand champion was Kathy Mase's Ken-Ire Isaac Corrin, a 3-year-old owned and bred cow.

In the Ayrshire breed, the Hernley family — Merrit, Heather and Amber — showed the grand

Hot Weather May Call For Dairy Cow Ration Changes

GERALD J. McCAMMON
4-H Youth Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As summer brings longer days and higher temperatures, dairy producers should adjust herd feeding practices to ease the effects of heat stress on feed intake, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Cows begin to eat less when temperatures rise above 80 degrees Fahrenheit," said Virginia Ishler, extension assistant in dairy and animal science. "During the summer, producers can keep feed intake higher by maximizing cow comfort."

Helping cows stay cool will help them maintain their appetite. "Keep cows inside during the day if it is cooler for them. Make sure they have adequate shade over feeding areas and while out on pasture."

As temperatures rise, ventilation in animal facilities becomes more important. "Make sure that all barn fans are working properly," Ishler said. "Keep air moving through holding areas. If feasible, reduce the number of cows entering a holding area at one time."

Providing the majority of the ration during cooler times of the day will ensure that your cows have feed when they're most likely to eat. "For example, feed between 4 and 6 a.m. and 9 to 11 p.m.," Ishler said.

High-moisture ingredients such as corn silage, hay-crop forage and high-moisture grains will heat if left sitting around during the day. "Feeding ensiled items more frequently will prevent this and help your herd maintain feed intake."

Prepare total mixed rations (TMR's) immediately before feeding. "Don't keep mixed feed in the mixer wagon during the day," Ishler said. "This will shorten the bunk life of the TMR. The same concept holds true for high-moisture grains, which should not sit in a feed cart for more than one or two hours."

To compensate for lower feed intakes, boost the energy and nutrient density of the ration per unit of dry matter consumed. "You can do this by increasing concentrate dry matter in the ration," Ishler said. "But keep enough effective fiber in the ration to promote normal rumen function."

Cows may tolerate lower levels of forage neutral detergent fiber — .80 to .90 percent of body weight — for brief periods, but don't let forage dry matter intake fall below 1.5 percent of body weight. Offering aftermath cuttings of hay or hay-crop forages and whole-plant corn silage also helps to optimize feed intake in hot weather.

Adding supplemental fat can increase the energy density of the ration. "The total dietary fat content in the ration dry matter should not exceed 5 percent when oilseed ingredients are fed," said Ishler. "Rumen-protected or rumen-inert fat sources can provide additional energy, resulting in a dietary fat content of 6 to 7 percent. But cost-effectiveness depends on the level of milk production, the herd's average stage of lactation and the body condition of the cows."

Maintaining proper protein ratios during the summer also is important. "Rumen undegradable protein should make up 36 to 39 percent of the total crude protein for cows in early lactation," she said. "Soluble protein should constitute 30 to 34 percent of the total crude protein."

Boosting levels of certain minerals will help milk cows compensate for nigher nutrient losses during hot, humid weather. "On a dry matter basis, potassium should range between 1.4 and 1.5 percent of the ration," Ishler said. "Sodium can make up .45 to .55 percent, magnesium .30 to .35 percent and salt .50 percent of the ration. Chlorine should range between .25 and .30 percent of the ration dry matter."

The bottom line for managing dairy cattle during summer is to keep them comfortable, Ishler said. "Take steps to keep cows productive by reducing heat stress and making any necessary dietary adjustments."

Sustainable Ag Field Day Set For Juniata Farm

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — A field day demonstration and seminar on practical sustainable agriculture techniques has been scheduled for August 6 at the Ed and Lorraine Rits farm, in Honey Grove.

According to a news release, a number of the state's top authorities on sustainable agriculture procedures are to explain the definition of "sustainable agriculture" and techniques which can help achieve it.

A fee of $5 per person covers the cost of the lunch and helps with costs of the field day. The event is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), American Farmland Trust (AFT), and Penn State University Cooperative Extension Service.

Scheduled to be present are Tim Bowser, executive director of PASA, Lamonte Garber, agricultural policy specialist for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and Bryan Petrucci, director of Sustainable Agriculture Programs of the AFT.

According to the release, host farm owner Ed Rits is to explain

World Expo Announces Recognition Winners

MADISON, Wis. — Every year, World Dairy Expo recognizes four individuals for their outstanding contributions to the dairy industry. These exceptional people have been selected for their achievements, participation, and leadership in both dairy and community activities.

In addition to Joyce Bupp, who is featured in this issue, this year's World Dairy Expo Recognition Award winners are:

• Clarence Boyke, Dairyman of the Year. Boyke's Vir-Clar Farms, near Fond du Lac, Wis., covers 325 acres and is home to 250 dairy cattle. His registered Holstein herd carries a BAA of 107.9 and a herd average of 22,487 pounds of milk. Thirty-nine cows from Boyke's farm have produced more than 30,000 pounds of milk and two have surpassed 40,000 pounds. Boyke has been a 4-H dairy leader for more than 20 years and is currently president of the Fond du Lac county fair board. In addition, Boyke has served as a board member for his county DHIA, district 7-B AMPI, the East Central Breeders Cooperative, and Select Sires.

It's these qualities that have enabled Joyce to love farming and share that love with others.

John D. Ag Showcase Again Draws Large Crowd With Equipment Working In Fields

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

FAIR HILL, MD—One of the fastest growing exhibitions of farm equipment was held this week as part of the 40th anniversary of the Cecil County Fair. Billed as Ag Showcase Day, the largest ever crowd of farmers attended to see the various brands of farm tractors and equipment compete with each other in field operating conditions.

But what really captured attention was the operation of half century-old antique equipment beside the big new equipment. For example, in the hay making demonstration, a 77 New Holland Baler from the early '50s pulled by a Fordson; a 1950 Allis Chalmers tractor and a 1955 Allis Chalmers tractor; and a 1963 John Deere baler pulled by a 1951 John Deere B were part of the show. You could almost feel the nostalgia creep down the wind rows and up the spines of many of the men and women who had started farming with these antique machines. A real working comparison of the old versus the new.

Equipment sponsors for the showcase included Ag Industrial, Biggs, Inc., Cooper Ent., Benjamin Haines Equipment, C. B. Hoober & Sons, and Mid-Atlantic Agrisystems. Supporting sponsors included: Cecil County Fair Board; Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland; Cecil County Soil Conservation Service/District; Central Maryland Farm Credit; Maryland Department of Natural Resources; and Fair Hill Farms.

Officials estimated attendance at 400 during the day-long show.

Field Days To Highlight Sustainable Ag

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — A series of field days will be held in Pennsylvania this summer to show a wide range of sustainable farming techniques being used on farms in the state.

Sponsoreld by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), the public is invited to attend any or all of the field days at no charge. Printed fliers for each field day, including directions, can be obtained by calling the PASA office at (814) 349-9856.

• On August 6, Ed and Lorraine Rits will host a field day at their farm near Honey Grove in Juniata County from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Rits have a cow/calf beef operation on 205 acres and utilize intensive rotational grazing methods. Previously, they raised hogs and dairy cows on high input grain crops. They will discuss how and why they have convereted to their present system. Also highlighted will be a matua brome grass seeding, composting demonstration, fencing and watering systems, and much more. The field day is cosponsored by PASA and Rits Consulting Service. Lunch will be available for purchase. For more information, contact Ed Rits at (717) 734-3745.

• On August 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Walnut Acres in Snyder County at Penns Creek will hold a special farm field day to show organic production of vegetables, grains, and legumes in a five year rotation. Walnut Acres is one of the oldest organic farms in the state, with affiliated food processing and mail order sales businesses that are known nationally and internationally. Lunch will be available for purchase. For further information, contact PASA or Walnut Acres Customer Service at (800) 344-9025.

• The final 1993 summer field day will be held on August 31 and will focus on dairy grazing at Garry and Linda VanDeWeerts' Grassroots Farm near Athens; Bill, Janet, and Curtis Browns' Browncroft Farm near Rome in Bradford County, and two farms across the border in New York state. The VanDeWeert's will show low-cost rotational grazing alternatives, experimental forage crops (including Puna chicory, Matua grass, and others), pastured poultry, and much more. Dr. Jerry Jung of the USDA Pasture Research Labs will give a presentation on the forage trials that he has conducted with the VanDeWeerts on their farm for the past few years.

Browncroft Farm features a rotational grazing system that has been in use since the late 1950s when the Browns started farming. Advocates of small scale dairying and diversity, Bill was named a Pennsylvania Master Farmer in 1990. The Browns are a seasonal dairy with approximately 30 to 35 registered Holstein milkers. They also have a sugar bush and maple syrup business.

The Aug. 31 Pasture Field Day is cosponsored by PASA, Bradford Co. Cooperative Extension, and Cooperative Extension in Chemung and Tioga counties in New York. For more information, contact PASA or Tom Maloney at Bradford County Cooperative Extension (717) 265-2896.

For more information, contact PASA at (814) 349-9856.

Water Quality Practices At Workshop

UNION BRIDGE, Md. — On Thursday, August 5 the Monocacy Watershed Project will be conducting a workshop for farmers on cover crops (9:30 a.m.-11:30 a.m.) and methods of livestock management (12:30 p.m.-2:30 p.m.) to protect water quality.

The free workshop will be at the Union Bridge Community Center on Ladiesburg Road in Union Bridge.

Drawing on his many years of research on cover crops, Dr. Morris Decker of the University of Maryland will talk about the benefits of planting cover crops. As a separate topic, the Maryland Agricultural Cost Share (MACS) program for cover crops will be explained. Because the deadline for signing up and getting approved for this fall's planting season is August 15, all farmers interested in this program are urged to attend.

As a wrap-up to the morning session, the workshop will look at how a barnyard area needs to be managed as one system to keep animal waste and clean water where you want them.

During the afternoon session the workshop will be looking at the value of new approaches to animal management. Streams play vital roles to farms and communities. The event will be looking at ways to get the maximum benefits for livestock while still protecting water quality.

One practice being used in Pennsylvania and Virginia is loafing lot management systems to provide exercise areas that minimize water quality problems. The workshop will be discussing and showing a video tape of several dairy operations of this type in Lancaster, Pa.

The main principle behind loafing lot systems is to rotate animals into at least three small 2-3 acre pastures after they have been milked and fed. Each pasture would only be used several days and would have time to rest and regrow before animals are turned in again. The pastures are not used for forage production, but are planted to grass, usually tall fescue, to maintain a protective cover to trap nutrients and stop soil erosion. During wet weather conditions, a sacrifice area, such as a concrete holding pad, needs to be used instead of the pastures so that animals are not on wet saturated fields.

Some of the benefits that have been observed from the creation of these pastures include a large reduction in the amount of soil lost from an exercise lot. Cows have cleaner udders, which reduces milking time. Cases of mastitis and reproductive infections are reduced. Grassed lots are cooler in summer than bare lots, reducing animal stress. Less time is needed to get the cows in for milking. Cows exhibit heat better on grass than on concrete. The public image of farming operations is also improved by the cleaner-looking pasture and farmstead areas.

Another topic we will review is the concept of rotational grazing systems for livestock operations. The event will include a videotape of a beef cattle operation in Pennsylvania that successfully uses these practices.

If you have any questions on either of the two half-day sessions, contact the Monocacy Office at (301) 898-0133 in Frederick or (410) 775-7434 in Carroll County.

N.Y. Dairymen Serve As Examples For Clean Water

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The voluntary, locally based effort by farmers in the New York City Watershed Program should serve as a model for the reauthorization of the Clean Water Act, New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Richard T. McGuire last week told members of a U.S. Senate subcommittee.

In testimony before the Senate Environment and Public Works Subcommittee on Clean Water, Fisheries and Wildlife, McGuire said the New York City program has a "proven record of success" and stressed the program's importance for the development of national nonpoint source (NPS) pollution control policy.

"The program is locally delivered and administered by an existing — not a new — group of institutions with whom farmers are familiar; who understand farming science, methods and techniques, and farm business operations; and whom farmers trust," McGuire said in describing the success of the New York program.

"The system for pursuing the city's water quality objectives, as they are affected by the agricultural segment of the watershed community, was arrived at by negotiation and consensus — not by fiat."

The New York City Watershed Program is a cooperative effort to preserve water quality in the New York City Watershed area involving the farm community; New York City, local government and New York State.

The program is based upon the prospective voluntary adoption of best management practices to control NPS by more than 550 dairy farmers in the New York City Watershed area.

According to McGuire, the city's original intent was to establish mandatory restrictive agricultural land use regulations. However, after consultation a locally developed and administered program of best management practices, tailored farm by farm, with the voluntary cooperation of the farm operator was determined to contribute far more to achieving water quality goals, as well as enhancing the viability of the farm enterprise and the agricultural economy.

McGuire, who also testified on behalf of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA), emphasized that a key element of the New York program was cost sharing.

"The cost of both the farm planning process and the installation of practices called for by each plan to achieve the pollution prevention goals of the responsible agency is financed by the responsible agency — or, in any case, not by the farmer," he said. "Once the front-end costs are overcome, these improvements will benefit the economic operation of the farm." McGuire urged the Subcommittee to "strongly consider" the principles embodied in the New York City program.

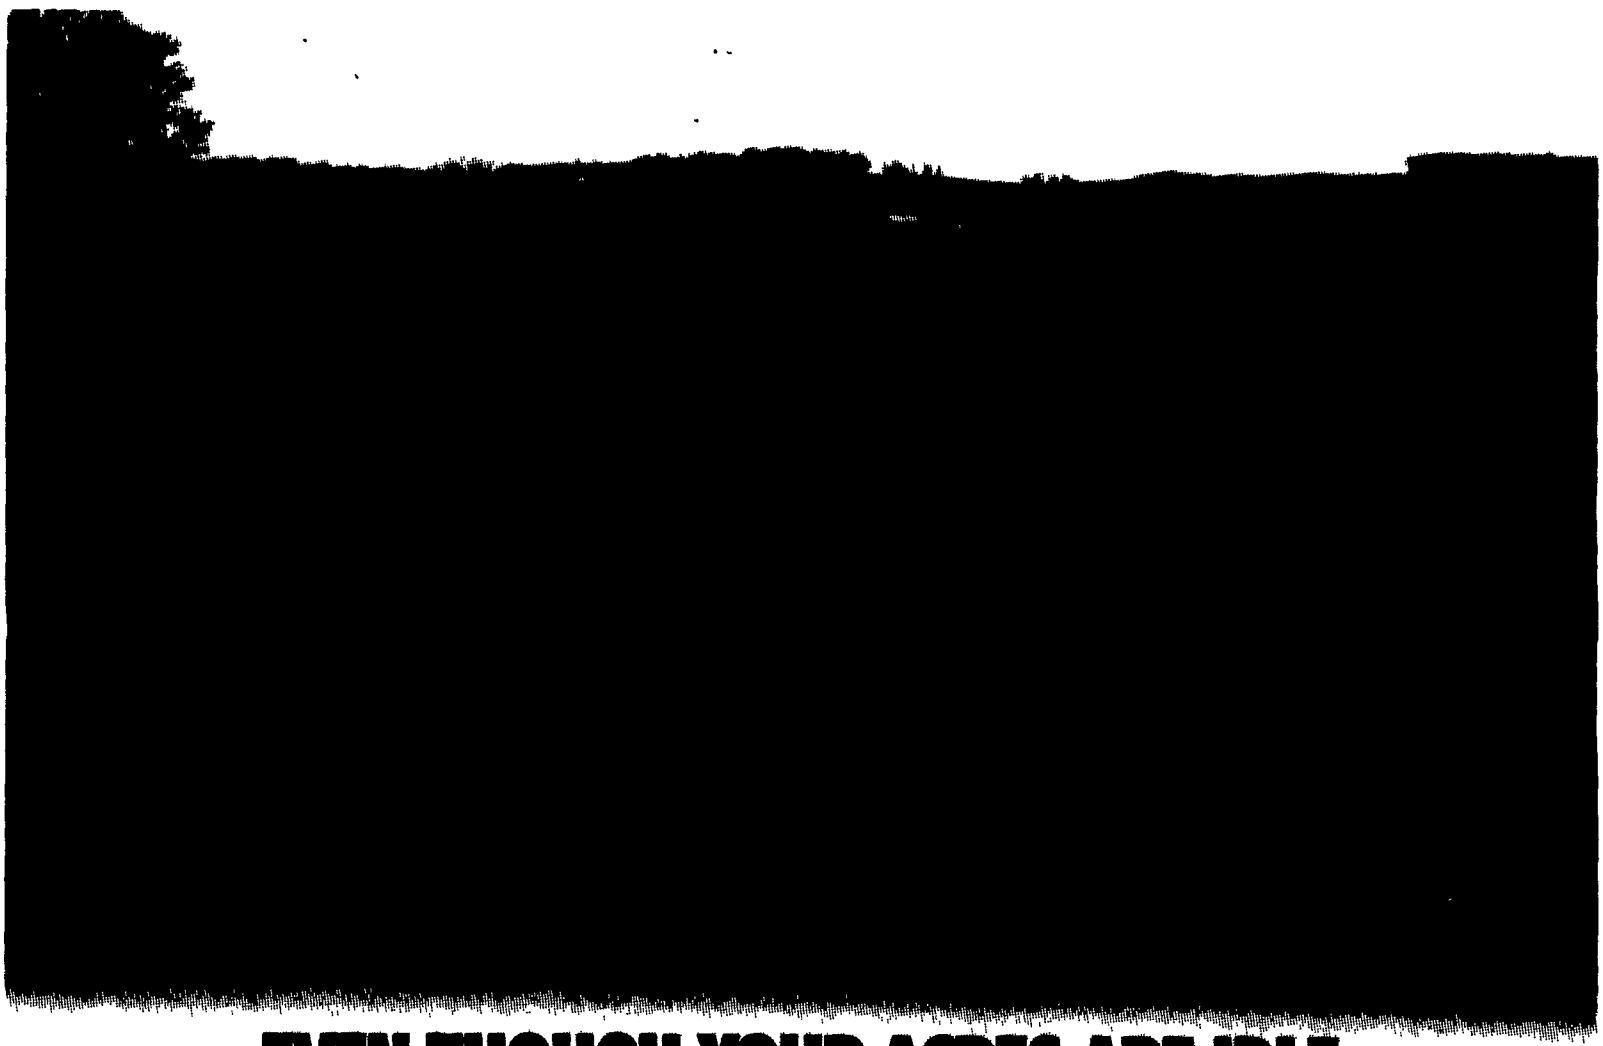
MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK



EVEN THOUGH YOUR ACRES ARE IDLE, YOUR WEEDS ARE NOT. KNOCK THEM OUT WITH ROUNDUP®

QUALIFYING FOR THE SET-ASIDE PROGRAM MEANS KEEPING WEEDS UNDER CONTROL.
Roundup® herbicide controls labeled annual and perennial weeds like quackgrass, lambsquarters, johnsongrass and foxtails. For quackgrass or johnsongrass, one application at the 1 qt. rate* (5-10 GPA) gives season-long control. At even lower rates, Roundup in a tank mix with 2,4-D amine can control labeled annual weeds.

ROUNDUP BEATS MOWING BECAUSE WEEDS WON'T GROW BACK
Mowing doesn't really control weeds and can take 3 or 4 trips per season just to keep them in check. When you want to put your acres back into production, you may be looking at infestations that could need extra work, chemicals—and time. With Roundup, one application controls weeds, roots and all, with no carryover for an entire season.

ROUNDUP HELPS SAVE YOUR SOIL AND YOUR EQUIPMENT.
Because Roundup works the way it does, the dead weeds work for you. They stay in the ground to help prevent soil erosion. There are other benefits, too. With fewer trips over your fields, you'll save fuel, wear and tear on your equipment, and time for you to do more important things.

It all adds up to this: The best way to maintain your idle acres and to control annual and perennial weeds is with Roundup. And that's not idle talk.

*In sods, pastures or areas where annual tillage is not performed, apply 2-3 qts of Roundup in 10-40 gallons of water per acre
Treat weeds when they are actively growing and less than 6" tall

State Cattlemen, Angus Association Holds Field Day

By
GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

FRIEDENS (Somerset Co.) — This year the Pa. Cattlemen's and Angus Associations held a joint field day at the ErReR Hill Farms, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Riggs, on July 24. The last state field day held in Somerset was some 20 years ago.

According to the official registry the hundreds who attended came for at least 25 counties in the state, plus Ohio, Maryland and Virginia.

Perfect weather with a low humidity level helped to make a comfortable day under the big outdoor canopy where speakers addressed the group. The brick picnic pavilion beside it where lunch was served also provided seating.

Schoolbus farm tours during the forenoon gave guests a good look at the ErReR Hill Farms Angus operation, as they bumped along over the paved rural backroads, weaving around the 1,200 acres and 10 barns. The entire business is a collection of smaller farms.

Tours were stopped at a recently completed streambed crossing and water system project, the benefits of which were detailed by Burrell Whitworth from the USDA.

Full-time farm employees Bob Hay, David Wise and Rob Landis were tourguides, telling about the Angus handling process from beginning to end, and the barns' utilization.

ErReR Hill Farms cow herd includes some 200 females. They raise their own replacement females and herd bull prospects. They use both embyro transfer and artificial insemination and have their own backgrounding and feedlot operations. Where feasible, water development systems and rotational grazing are utilized.

Here is Fortune 2000

Penn State TKO is the main herd bull of the 20 at ErReR Hill Farms. They also hold an interest in Fortune 2000 who was brought in from West Virginia for the event.

Fortune 2000 has been favorably analyzed by many knowledgeable cattlemen, according to sources; in kind, pedigree, performance and calving ease. He is said to be a very correct bull with a charisma that catches the eye of cattle breeders. He was producing freezable semen at 11 months, sources said.

Minerts Fortune 2000 was calved on February 12, 1991.

Two national leaders spoke during the afternoon: Burton Eller, Alexandria, Va., who is the executive vice-president of the National Cattlemen's Association, and Richard Spader, executive vice-president of the American Angus Association, from Rosendale, Mo.

Eller who supervises the NCA office staffs in Washington, D.C and Denver, and cited in one publication as a top lobbyist in the nation's capitol, said he's hearing a big noise from commercial beef users demanding consistency and palatability in the beef products they serve.

"The biggest issue in demand" he said, "is cost."

He addressed the issue of competition for beef from poultry and pork, quoting from another source, "Pork's going to kick your economic butt in the next ten years, not poultry.' "

Spader said the number one priority is to expand value and use that as the performance data base. He said the carcass evaluation is the next priority. "You are going to see more emphasis in carcass evaluation," he said, "so we can compete with poultry and pork."

The beef industry has a big job to promote breed assets to the practical users of beef, Spader said. Additionally, equipping young people for future leadership through contests, speeches and other ways is a priority, he said.

Members of the state's Cattlemen's and Angus associations gather at this permanent pavilion at ErReR Hill Farms for a combined-organization field day.

Using the upper and lower barn levels and the outside seating, rotating afternoon sessions were held by Penn State officials. Dr. Erskine Cash talked about the Dollars And Cents of EPD's; Dr. John Comerford's subject was Cross Breeding Advantages; Dr. Jim Evans discussed Embryo Transplant Programs.

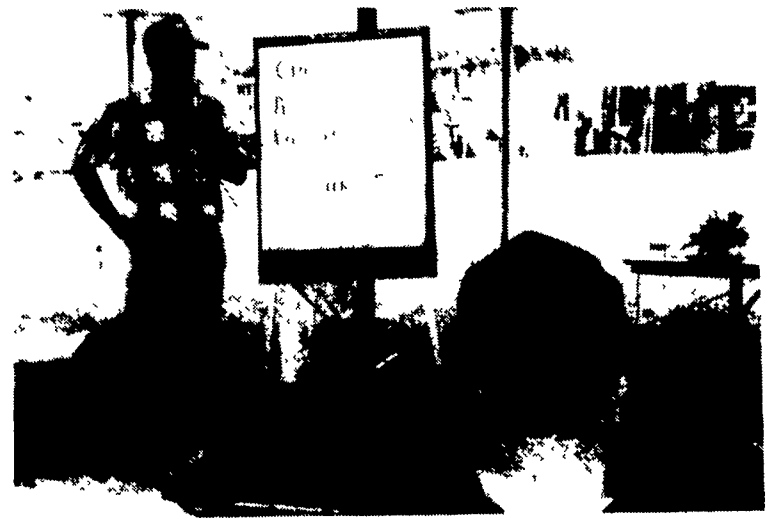
Sessions lasted 30 to 40 minutes and folks who sat on the arranged hay sales sure seemed to appreciate the cool comfort and shade they found inside the big barn.

A judging contest was held for class of heifers, steers and cow/calf. Kay Chapman, Benton (Columbia Co.), was the big winner, scoring 148 of a possible 150 points. "I was lucky today," she laughed.

Placing high in the junior division was Ed Chapman, her son.

Riggs said that because the farm is well-equipped to handle groups — the family reunion and occasional senior citizen groups — preparing for the state groups didn't cause any unusual problems or excessive work. "We have a general (property) cleanup every year," he said.

Bob Hay, manager of the ErReR Hill Farms is also the vice-president of the state Cattlemen's Asso.



Dr. John Comerford, PSU Extension specialist, talks about advantages to cross breeding, during a field day held jointly by the state Cattlemen's and Angus associations.

Penn State Installs Fencing

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Staff in Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science have installed state-of-the-art fencing at the Haller Farm facility. Developed in Australia, spider fencing delivers electricity across a durable super-fine wire.

This permanent fencing powers a portable fence in the form of a hand-held reel of white tape (or orange for contrast against snow). By walking in a circle behind the cattle and unwinding the tape, a single worker can herd cattle into another pasture or even a chute or truck ramp.

"Cattle quickly learn to respect the single strand of electrified tape and rarely challenge it," said Richard F. Todd, assistant beef and forage herd manager and resident fencing expert. "The tape can be draped over easily placed temporary fence posts to quickly adjust pasture size or to allow temporary grazing of crop residues such as corn stalks." Todd said the new fencing's flexibility requires fewer people to manage livestock and permits improved forage growth and utilization.

A summary of research and demonstration activities on beef cattle improvement, fencing and facilities, pasture management, and winter feeding systems is available from Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

The 19-page publication describes fencing and animal handling facilities, plant species and forage utilization systems, and genetic and production improvement programs at Penn State's Haller Farm. The report traces the 20-year development and evaluation of fencing, including facilities such as corrals and working chutes, various pasture species, winter shelter and feeding, and cattle breeding and selection.

Herd production levels currently average 650 pounds or more for 205-day, non-creep-fed weaning weight, 95 percent weaned calf crop, slaughter weight at 14 months of age for steers of 1,200 pounds, with two thirds of the steers grading Choice or higher.

The report was compiled by Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science; Peter J. LeVan, operations manager of Penn State's beef herds; and Richard F. Todd.

Richard F. Todd, assistant beef and forage herd manager and resident fencing expert at Penn State's Haller Farm, demonstrates state-of-the-art fencing recently installed at the facility.

Copies are available for $2 each or 10 for $12 by calling (814) 863-3663 or writing Lowell Wilson, The Pennsylvania State University, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Pa. DHIA Has Tech Jobs

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association is seeking applicants for technician positions.

The position involves gathering pertinent information monthly from dairy herds while maintaining the integrity of the rules established by the National Cooperative Dairy Herd Improvement Program.

Knowledge of dairying is helpful, but not necessary. Please submit in writing to Field Director, 1318 W. College Avenue, State College, PA 16803.

Association Begins Policy Development

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — "Policy Development is one of the most important facets of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association," according to Pennsylvania Farmers' Asso. Vice President Guy Donaldson, who also chairs PFA's State Policy Development Committee.

Most Adams County Farmers' Association members think of policy development as a once-a-year activity that flourishes just before annual meetings. But in reality, it's an organized, year-round program that's ongoing in every county association.

"Policy development is the tool that gives every member a voice in helping solve the problems that affect his or her business," said Donaldson. It is an organized program for gathering the ideas and opinions of members on important issues. The policies it produces are the foundation of the county, state and national farm bureaus.

"One thing that's important to remember," said Donaldson, "is that policy is decided by the majority farmer opinion. Once a policy is adopted by the majority it becomes the position of the entire organization." Policy guides the activities of the county and state association. Policy provides direction to the association officers and to the staff.

Deadlines for resolutions to be submitted to the Policy Development Committee is August 1, at the annual summer picnic.

For more information, contact Susan Benner, vice president, PD Committee Chairperson, (717) 334-1769.

ram want considerably less dollars from the U.S. Treasury, and in fact a true two tier program would cost less, understand, less than present dairy programs.

However, when some people want to confuse dairy farmers on a program, then one of the best ways is to issue misinformation about the program.

Two tier simply means the milk used in commercial channels, plus a reasonable reserve will be priced at a realistic price. This must be an affordable price to consumers, but more importantly, it must be a price that covers the average cost of production. I believe this affordable price could return to producers a blend price of between $15.25 and $15.50 per cwt. in the New York market.

No, this price is not a pipe dream, and no, we are not saying things that farmers want to hear, we're saying a price that the average dairy farmer says he needs.

The remaining milk, maybe three or four percent (at tops) of total production would command a much cheaper price.

This program is attainable, but it will take a lot of hard work to obtain it.

Some co-op leaders are still hammering away at many of the dairy farmers that attended the recent dairy summit. Lewis Gardner, President of Eastern called the event a circus. I call the summit a breath of fresh air. Quite a difference.

Reading some of the press releases by some people, one could believe there was almost continued disruption at the summit. While two or three speakers presentations were greeted with dissatisfaction by many of the farmers present, the majority of the reaction was reserved by the farmers with a resounding applause for the presenters they agreed with. No one less than Senator Pat Leahy, Chairman of the Ag Committee announced to the crowd, while he normally does not allow applause at a hearing, but in this case he would allow applause as long as it didn't directly interfere with a presenter.

You know, I really feel worry for some of our dairy leaders. I really think you are missing the degree of hardships that the majority of dairy farmers are experiencing.

Every dairy leader should take one week and go up and down the roads. Stop at every dairy farm you come to. Ask them how things are. Ask them what they need for an annual average milk price. Ask them where the wife works to keep the farm going, and then ask them what kind of a dairy program they want.

I'm sorry for the people that allowed some noise at the summit to bother them. Maybe you need more noise. Remember the majority of the dairy farmers at the summit came from over twenty states, paid their own way, some sold animals to obtain cash to be there.

Remember every one had the same opportunity to be there. Every co-op had the opportunity to take producers there. Wouldn't that have been a nice way to spend some of the cooperative payment money from order #2 that some co-ops receive.

The summit allowed dairy farmers to express their satisfaction or dissatisfaction with proposed dairy policies.

The summit finished up with Senator Leahy opening up the microphones. I feel that at least 90% of response from audience supported the philosophy of the National Dairy Campaign (this response lasted over one hour).

Some may call the summit a side show, a carnival or a circus. I'm sorry — you people were simply outstaged.

Thank God for the summit; I still call it a "breath of fresh air."

Sincerely,
ARDEN TEWKSBURY
Manager PRO AG

Maryland Crowns Dairy Princess

ington County. She has been active in 4-H for the past eight years, showing her Jersey and Holstein dairy animals, Suffolk sheep and German Shepherd dog. A champion public speaker, she participated as a Maryland delegate to the 1991 National 4-H Conference, testified at Maryland Public Hearings to defend 4-H against proposed budget cuts, is a 4-H Ambassador, and participates in Maryland 4-H Teen Focus.

Dawn has also gained experience for her role as princess from prior reigns as Maryland Farm Bureau Queen, Maryland Jersey Queen and Washington County Dairy Princess.

High school activities claimed much of her sparetime. Her interest in music is evident by the instruments she plays, clarinet, fiddle, violin, and organ. She was a member of the Williamsport High School Blue Band, concert, and marching band, member of Wind Ensemble, and First Chair clarinet. The Student Council and French Club are also part of her student activities. She plans to attend Western Maryland College this fall majoring in communications and public relations.

Dawn's farm and home responsibilities include feeding, grooming, and training 4-H animals, cleaning and maintaining the milking parlor, office work, and some field work.

First runner-up was Carroll County Dairy Princess Mary Ellen Seraydian, who is the daughter of Charles and Mary Ann Seraydian. She will be a junior at Francis Scott Key High School this fall where she is vice president of the FFA. Seraydian has won state and regional 4-H public speaking contests and participates in dairy cattle judging and dairy bowl. In pursuit of her interest in natural resources, she has attended regional and national conferences in New York and Washington, D.C. She works on the family's dairy farm where she owns 12 animals. Her future plans include obtaining a degree in veterinary medicine or wildlife management.

Three other contestants who were winners of their area contests, competed for the state crown: Martha Chaney, Baltimore Harford; Abigail Sowers, Frederick; and Kristi Geary, South Central.

For entertainment, the audience was treated to a preview of a video, "Make Mine Milk," which the princesses will be using in promotions throughout the coming year. This video was produced by the American Dairy Association and plans are to distribute copies to all elementary schools.

Emcee for the evening was Jeff Myers, owner of Delmyr Holelrine, of Westminister. Judging the contest were Pam Kilgore, Airville, Pa.; Mim Kauffman, Elizabethtown, Pa., and Charlie Garrison, Arlington, Va.

Laurie Zimmerman dedicated the last milk toast of her reign "to the COW who made it all possible."

What Is An Adequate TMR Mix?

DENNIS R. BUCKMASTER
PSU Assistant Professor

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The importance of feeding dairy cows with totally mixed rations (TMR) is clear from industry trends.

All current indications are that TMR is the feeding system of choice for the 1990s and beyond. It is now the most rapidly growing feeding style in the developed countries.

By definition, TMR implies that all required nutrients are in one mix which is fed ad libitum. Because there are no other supplemental feeds, it is imperative that all nutrients (energy, fiber, protein, macrominerals, trace minerals and vitamins) be thoroughly blended in the mix so as to reduce the possibility of animals missing their allotment.

With TMRs generated on the farm, feed quality and mixing become the farmers' responsibility.

One reason for failure of TMR feeding systems is poor management of mixing. Good information regarding mix management will be even more important in the future as more commodity and by product feeds are used and the production potential of animals continues to rise.

There has been much research related to the nutritional advantages of TMR feeding. However, there is very little known from an engineering perspective on how to get the job done most efficiently.

It is also very ironic that the industry has latched on to the acronym TMR without defining the first two letters. "Totally mixed" has not been defined well to date in quantitative terms.

In 1992, a mixer experiment was performed at the Penn State Dairy Research Center with the goal of obtaining data regarding mix uniformity so that methods of evaluation could be determined. Three variables (mix type, order of adding ingredients, mixture) which potentially have great impact on mix uniformity were studied.

The experiment was designed around the objectives of determining if there were significant differences between mix uniformity for two types of mixers, two orders of adding ingredients, and two durations of mixing.

Samples collected were analyzed for particle size distribution, density, and concentrations of dry matter, crude protein, acid detergent fiber, neutral detergent fiber, and ash.

With primary interest in mix uniformity, the variations in mix attributes were of more interest than the mean characteristics.

Characterizing "good enough" involves the use of confidence intervals on ration attributes. A solid definition of "good enough" is currently unknown from a nutritional point of view, but that may be partly due to the lack of any method to express it to date.

For the batches blended as part of our research, all nutrient measures were within 6-percent of the average value.

Confidence intervals showed that the variations in ration attributes after mixing were certainly within lab analysis errors of the attributes involved.

For the conditions in our experiment, every batch seemed to be well mixed. This being the case, mixing time could possibly be reduced from eight minutes to two minutes without an adverse affect on mix uniformity.

If our work was representative of what is done on the farm — and we think it was — mixing time could be shortened to reduce labor requirements, reduce energy consumption and yield potentially longer service life of the machinery.

There was a tendency to do a less thorough job of mixing the longer particles than the smaller particles. This was true regardless of the mixer, fill order or mixing time. It was clear that mixing altered the particle size distribution with particle size reduced during mixing.

Based on this limited research, we plan to draft an American Society of Agricultural Engineering (ASAE) Standard related to expression of mix uniformity. We hope this will lead to further refinements in dairy feeding systems and improved operator awareness as to the critical factors related to feeding TMRs to the high producing dairy cows.

Soybean Yield Contest Set

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The 1993 Pennsylvania Soybean Yield Contest is open for producers who farm in Pennsylvania and who produce five acres or more of soybeans within Pennsylvania's boundaries.

The purpose of the contest, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board, is to demonstrate the practices necessary to produce maximum economic yields and to encourage the production of high-quality soybeans.

According to the board, participants will be restricted to nonirrigated soybeans only, but will not be restricted as to variety, fertilization, spacing, or other cultural practices.

Deadline for participation is August 15, and intent must be submitted to the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board, ATTN: John Yocum, P.O. Box 308, Landsiville, PA 17538.

According to the board, three acres in one block (for example, 209 feet X 627 feet equals 3 acres) from a field of at least five acres within the physical boundaries of the state must be selected by the grower. A designated representative (other than the grower) must measure the test area, be present when the test area is harvested, supervise weighing on state-inspected scales or an approved weigh wagon, and sign the report.

Only one entry per farm will be accepted. There is no charge for participating in the contest. A designated representative shall arrange for official sampling and moisture determination of the harvested soybeans as well as obtain a sample for grading. Moisture content will be obtained on a state-approved moisture meter from the sample drawn. Acre yields will be calculated on the basis of 13 percent moisture. All foreign material in excess of 1 percent will be deducted from the gross weight.

Awards will include a trophy and designated State Yield Champion for the grower who produced the greatest yield per acre. Also, second and third place winners will also be recognized with trophies. Each contestant who produces in excess of 60 bushels per acre from a plot officially entered into the contest will receive an engraved plaque designating membership in the 60-Bushel Club.

For more information, contact Yocum at the address provided.

'Hare' Raising Experts Teach Rabbit Care

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Raising rabbits is serious business. At least it is for Dwight and Sarah Algoe, and daughters Emily and Erin.

Rabbit hutches in the Algoes backyard house 200 rabbits. These rabbits live with the luxury of piped in music 24 hours a day.

The music, according to Sarah, calms the rabbits and exposes them to noise so that the rabbits participating in shows are accustomed to noise and remain calm.

Each family member raises a different breed of rabbits. Dwight raises Californians, Sarah, Palominos; 14-year-old Emily, Black Tans; and 16-year-old Erin, New Zealand Whites.

To an onlooker, most of the rabbits in each breed look alike, but Erin claims that if all 70 rabbits were released, and gathered together again, she could name each one.

"Each one has its own personality and little quirks," said Erin, who spends hours tending the rabbits.

Lest anyone think that rabbits are "brainless", Erin is quick to point out that rabbits have the mentality of cats and can be litter trained.

The Algoes, who live in Mount Joy, attend about 20 rabbit shows each year. But it isn't just their rabbits that they are interested in promoting but also the rabbits belonging to the 27 members of the 4-H club that they lead.

For anyone familiar to 4-H rabbit clubs, the names Dwight and Sarah Algoe are heard again and again. Their names are spoken almost reverently by 4-H members and their parents. According to members, this esteem is earned by the Algoes because their efforts go beyond the call of duty. The Algoes are dedicated to giving individual attention to each member. They pay special attention to details, and send a gift subscription of the Rabbit Breeders Club magazine to each member. They print a monthly newsletter with news and details of upcoming shows.

Gary and Judy Zurin, whose 12-year-old daughter Sarah is in the club, said, "The Algoes are super leaders. They always contact the members individually and follow-up with visits."

The Algoes said, "Parents' participation in the club keeps kids' interest high. Some parents even become more interested than their child does in rabbit raising."

The Algoes started in the rabbit raising business about 11 years ago, when they purchased a New Zealand White for their daughter. Later, Dwight's brother, who lives in California, gave them a Californian pair. When the offspring took a champion reserve ribbon at the E-town Fair, the Algoes caught the excitement of competition. They attended the York Fair, where they met Bob Gebhart, who has showed rabbits for many years. The Algoes purchased a trio of rabbits from Gebhart, and since then, have gradually improved their breeding and show stock.

When the Algoes first began their rabbit raising, they were not affiliated with 4-H, but someone soon suggested the couple would make good 4-H leaders for the club. The Algoes accepted the volunteer responsibility and watched as their club grew from six to 27 members within three years.

In the open show, the Algoes' rabbits sometimes compete with the rabbits of club members. This adds extra excitement for the members who count it a special accomplishment if they can win over their leaders.

One time, a club member had a rabbit with a mean temperament so the Algoes gave the member one of their rabbits. That rabbit has consistently been beating the Algoes' rabbits ever since.

Shows are becoming more competitive as more and more children raise them because they do not have the facilities to raise larger animals. Some shows have as many as 250 rabbits competing. The Rabbit Association recognizes 45 different breeds. Mt. Joy 4-H Club members raise about 12 different breeds.

During judging most breeds must sit and are judged by the rounded hump on their backs, but Tans run loose so that the markings on their body can be judged.

Rabbits are not always the docile animals they appear to be. During judging, rabbits often fight and bite.

Pedigree rabbits cost from $25 to $200, but the Algoes sell their rabbits for considerably less to 4-H'ers.

Rabbits across the county are suffering from a hot-weather-related illnesses. Veterinarians say there is no cure for snuffles caused by changes in temperatures or from exposure to other rabbits with the illness. In recent weeks, the Algoes' stock has dwindled to 70 head because hot weather places severe stress on rabbits.

"Rabbits can take cold weather much easier than hot," Sarah said. "They survived the blizzard fine in outdoor hutches, but the hot weather has taken its toll."

Bottles of frozen water are placed in the pens for the rabbits that lay next to it to cool off and the rabbits' ears are misted with a water spray. Wet cloths are also placed in the pen for rabbits to lay on.

Among the numerous rabbit hutches, the Algoes have a retirement cottage for the rabbits that become too old for show. Living in pampered style are one daughter's first Holland Lap, and the Californian pair.

Although the Algoes do butcher rabbits for eating, Sarah said that she never lets the children know the name of the rabbit that is being consumed and that she has found novel ways to serve rabbit meat in soup and casseroles in addition to grilling, frying, roasting, and cooking. Sarah said that rabbit can be substituted for chicken in poultry recipes.

One of the most exciting events the 4-H Rabbit Club participates in is the 4-H Rabbit Knowledge Bowl. This year the Mt. Joy 4-H Rabbit Club hosted the Bowl, which six counties attended.

The Bowl was held at the Farm and Home Center on June 14. Competition was divided into two divisions, junior (8-13 years old) and senior (14-18 years old).

Members studied rabbit manuals and research information on breeds, care, and showing, to answer questions. The double elimination tournament pitted teams against each other. The winning team then competed against the other winning team until playoffs were completed. During the first round of questioning, the teams took turns answering the questions. In the second round, members used buzzers and the quickest one to respond answered the question. During the final round, individuals were quizzed.

Members had 10 seconds to answer questions. In one competition, junior division team members had a tie, which was broken when the judges asked a question used in senior division competition.

About 40 4-H'ers from Bucks, Berks, Montgomery, Dauphin, Lancaster, and York counties participated while more than 100 people watched the competition.

Because the Mt. Joy club hosted the event, it was responsible for providing the trophies. The Algoes had a relative cut out wooden plaques. Sarah used a woodburning tool to carve the 4-H clover into the wood, which was then stained. A brass template identifying the award was attached.

The Mt. Joy club also provided the meal for the Rabbit Bowl.

The club holds one fund raiser annually by selling subs, chips, and soda at the 4-H Fair.

Those who would like to know more about rabbits or the 4-H Rabbit Club, may contact the Algoes at 955 Iron Bridge Rd., Mt. Joy, PA 17552 or call (717) 653-4716.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

The cry of a kitten, that's what it sounded like.

In the shadowy darkness of early morning, I listened for a repeat of whatever had wakened me. The Farmer stirred, also awake.

"Do you think the bobcat's back?" I whispered to him.

About 10 yards from where we slept on the screened sleeping porch, an injured mule deer fawn recuperated in a sturdy, wire enclosure. After tumbling over a high cliff upriver — probably escaping a predator — the fawn had been rescued from a pile of river rocks by a group of white-water rafters. Its injured leg and mangled rump were healing nicely, after examination and treatment by a later group of rafters — six veterinarians.

Faced with the choice of letting the spotted fawn die, or bottle feed it as she had so many calves over the years, our daughter was raising the orphan here at the ranch.

In fact, the fawn had become the major attraction at Kirkwood Historic Ranch, Idaho, in Hells Canyon National Recreation Area. Hells Canyon is the deepest gorge in North America — and incredibly isolated. Travel is limited, by river on tourist jetboats that skip over the Snake's dozens of turbulent, white-water rapids, or rubber rafts that plummet through them.

Roads are almost non-existent in the canyon's 100-mile wild river stretch. Trails — two feet wide and either blasted from the sides of sheer rock cliffs or clinging to steep, brushy slopes — are as high as 400 feet above the waters of the Snake. They are surpassable by foot (do not look down!) or by extremely sure-footed horses or mules. Rattlesnakes, scorpions and black widow spiders are among the canyon's year-round "residents."

For the second summer, our daughter and her husband were living here, working as rangers for the U.S. Forest Service at this historic site. No longer an operating ranch, Kirkwood is tribute to a way of life that tough sheep ranchers scrabbled from an incredibly harsh and isolated world unto itself. Neither the small museum they tend, nor the snug little house in which they live, has electricity or phone.

They love it. So did we in the few days we'd been here.

And now, on this last night of our stay, we puzzled at what had wakened us. Was the bobcat back that had days before come hungrily snooping at the fawn's cage in broad daylight? The Farmer snatched the flashlight kept nearby, eased through the door to the small porch outside — and gasped one adrenalin-spiked word.

"COUGAR!"

Streaking to the bedroom across the hall, I hammered on what I hoped was a door, calling our son-in-law. In split seconds, six of us watched, dumbstruck, at the drama unfolding yards away. The cougar, dead fawn in mouth, was trying to escape the wire cage. Our son-in-law breathlessly uttered a phrase he'd repeat numerous times: "Man, that's a BIG cat!"

Though it seemed minutes, the huge cat fled the pen in probably 30 seconds, easily clearing the five-foot-high garden enclosure adjoining the fawn's pen. Hovering together we turned the light on my watch: 3:40 a.m.

No one volunteered to go investigate. Brushy, rocky canyon walls frame the very edge of the lawn. Returning to sleep seemed impossible; The Farmer kept jumping up every 10 minutes to spotlight the stretch of lawn.

A bit braver in sunsplashed daylight, we surveyed the killing scene. The heavy fencing was buckled and pushed inward on all sides, and the top mashed where the cougar had jumped up on top. From there, it leaped down into the adjoining, fenced garden, finally ripping a corner of the wire loose from the post holding the fence between the two enclosures. In the process, it mashed their onion patch and left behind paw prints as wide as The Farmer's big hands. Telltale bits of beige fur clung to numerous spots on the wire.

Later that day, we had to leave the canyon to return home. Our son-in-law accompanied us part way downriver, having overnight business to attend to, leaving our daughter to hold down Kirkwood Ranch. Alone.

Left behind when the cougar fled hours before was the dead fawn. Though we disposed of its body, we all knew the probability of the cat returning again that night. No one said much about it — but we all knew.

Leaving Kirkwood Historic Ranch in Hells Canyon was one of the hardest things I've ever had to do.

Eating For The 90s

As we continue to search for a "perfect" diet, we are bombarded with advice from health experts both real and professed. Each new research study seems to indicate a food or foods that are the cause or cure-all for every disease affecting mankind.

According to the American Dietetics Association, the key to the American diet is still variety, moderation and balance. Although they recommend limiting fat in the diet to 30% or less of daily calories consumed, fat plays an important role. Fat carries vitamins such as A, D, E and K within our body and protects the internal organs. Women particularly need fat to keep the endocrine system functioning properly.

It is extremely important to maintain fat in children's diets as fat provides more calories in denser form so they can consume enough calories for nervous system development and proper growth. Most pediatricians do not recommend limiting fat in the diet of children under 2 years of age.

When the original warnings concerning dietary cholesterol were issued, dairy and meat products were restricted. Now with the recognition that dietary cholesterol may not be the culprit in excess blood cholesterol, experts tell us that shortfalls exist in such areas as the B-vitamins, zinc, calcium and iron. Where did we once find these nutrients? Red meat and dairy products. Unfortunately consumers have not necessarily replaced these products wisely. Fried snacks and sodas are not the best substitutions for meat and milk.

According to the USDA's Food Pyramid guide, 2-3 servings of meat, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs and nuts can be consumed daily. Where does red meat fit into this plan? Choose the leanest cuts which will be found in the loin and hind-quarter cuts.

Choose any of the lean cuts to add to your pastas and stir-fry cooking. Smaller amounts of meat combined with vegetables and grains are excellent combinations for today's menus. Slices of sauteed or grilled red meat make excellent combinations with greens for a salad. Remember to use lowfat or no-fat dressings on your salad or you may ruin your attempt to manage the fat in your diet.

Remember there are no "good" foods or "bad" foods. Never eliminate foods from your diet but learn to include the foods that you enjoy in moderation. Don't eliminate your favorite dishes, but learn to cook them in a healthier manner or save them for special occasions. Supermarkets carry an overwhelming choice of fresh fruits, vegetables and meats. Food labels make excellent reading and you need to understand what those labels say. Learn how to use the new label information in your menu planning.

Limited Edition Tractor Benefits Farm Safety

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The safety of farmers throughout the United States is an important issue — one that should be considered a top priority.

That's why Old Guard Mutual Insurance Company of Lancaster, Pennsylvania has joined forces with Farm Safety 4 Just Kids and the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council through the Keystone Farm Safety Tractor Program.

Through the efforts of these three groups, the health and safety of America's farming community is promoted throughout the country. One of the most effective ways to do this is through the sale of Keystone Farm Safety Tractors. Every tractor model sold is an investment in dealing with the issues of farm safety and health.

1991 Limited Edition Keystone Farm Safety Tractor

When you purchase this limited edition collector's model, proceeds fund the ongoing programs of Farm Safety 4 Just Kids and the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council programs on farm safety.

Scrumptious Summertime Vegetables

"Nothing beats the taste and texture of locally grown produce," says Debra Bryant, Wayne County Extension director. While we may pick or buy the tastiest and best produce, what we do with it until it reaches the table makes a big difference in taste and how many vitamins remain in them.

Too much heat, light, moisture or air can damage even the best produce. As soon as the vegetables are picked, chemical changes start. For example, tomatoes will keep on ripening and developing more flavor. Sugar peas and sweet corn will lose sugar and turn tough shortly after being picked. Other vegetables like potatoes, carrots, and onions will keep for months if stored properly.

When cooking vegetables, use the smallest amount of water possible. Vitamins and other nutrients leach out into the water and will be lost. Try microwaving or stir-frying vegetables to keep the flavor, crispness, and nutrients.

Summer's bounty of garden-fresh vegetables invites wholesome eating and a never-ending variety of tasty, nutrition-packed meals. Make good use of fresh vegetables by trying these recipes.

CHICKEN WITH GARDEN FRESH VEGETABLES

1 broiler-fryer chicken, skinned, boned, cut in strips
3 large tomatoes, cut in chunks
1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch slivers
1 cucumber, sliced
4 green onions, sliced
12-ounces marinated artichoke hearts, chopped
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
½ cup sliced black olives
¼ cup sesame seeds, toasted

In large mixing bowl, place chicken while still warm. Add tomatoes, green pepper, cucumber, and green onions. Drain artichoke hearts and reserve marinade. Add artichoke hearts and black olives to chicken-vegetable mixture; toss gently to mix well. Mix reserved marinade with wine vinegar; pour over chicken. Cover and refrigerate until well chilled. At serving time, top with sesame seeds. Makes 6 generous servings.

GINGER CHICKEN AND CARROTS

4 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, skinned
6 carrots, scraped, sliced
½ cup chopped sweet red pepper
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger
2 tablespoons grated crystallized ginger
2 tablespoons butter-flavored vegetable oil spread

In 2-quart greased casserole, place carrots. Top with chicken breasts and sprinkle with red pepper. In small bowl, mix together lemon juice, salt, and ground ginger; pour over chicken. In small saucepan, place grated crystallized ginger and vegetable spread. Place over medium high temperature and cook, stirring, until melted; pour over chicken. Cover casserole and place in 350 degree-oven. Cook about 1 hour or until carrots are tender and fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. To serve, spoon carrots and sauce over chicken. Makes 4 servings.

VEGETABLES WITH HERB BUTTER

1 pound small new potatoes, scrubbed
2 cups sugar snap peas
¼ cup butter
2 teaspoons chopped fresh basil
1½ teaspoons chopped fresh thyme leaves
1 teaspoon chopped fresh tarragon
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Cut potatoes into halves or quarters. Place in medium saucepan with enough water to cover. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, until barely tender about 10 minutes. Add peas; continue simmering uncovered about 3 to 5 minutes, until tender. Drain. Discard water from saucepan; add butter. Cook over medium heat until butter is melted; stir in herbs. Return vegetables to pan; add salt and pepper. Toss lightly; heat through.

Ginger Chicken and carrots is a healthful and satisfying low-calorie meal with warm-weather appetite appeal.

FRESH SUMMER VEGETABLE MEDLEY

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 white onions, chopped
1 pound small zucchini, trimmed and cut into ¾ -inch rings
1½ pounds ripe tomatoes, preferably plum type and cut into 1-inch chunks
1 large green bell pepper, cleaned and chopped
½ cup loosely packed fresh oregano
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
4 cups corn kernels, preferably freshly cut

Melt butter in a large skillet over medium-high heat. When the butter is foaming, add the onions and saute until they begin to turn soft, about 8 minutes.

Stir in zucchini, tomatoes, and oregano. Add the pepper. Season with salt and pepper, cover and cook until tomatoes have given up much of their juice, about 15 minutes.

Stir in the corn, cover and continue cooking until it is tender, 5 to 8 minutes. Adjust seasoning, if necessary, and serve.

According to the Viennese, a torte is a round cake, but not every round cake is a torte. What makes the difference? Quality. In a city known to seasoned travelers as a pastry paradise, where layer after layer of the flat round torten cakes are stacked to create towering confections, the Linzertorte stands out. Though it is only one layer high, that layer is exceptionally rich and delicious.

Unlike other tortes that require considerable more time to prepare multiple layers and complex fillings, the Linzertorte is well suited for today's quick and easy lifestyle. It can even be frozen in advance of a special occasion, then thawed in the refrigerator.

For special occasions throughout the year make Cheesy Peach Torte. For the sake of authenticity, serve it with confectioners' sugar and whipped cream.

CHEESY PEACH TORTE
Yield: one 9-inch round cake

Crust:
⅔ cup all-purpose flour
⅓ cup whole wheat flour
½ cup finely ground pecans
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter

Filling:
1 container (15 oz.) part-skim Ricotta cheese
1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened
⅔ cup peach preserves
3 eggs
¼ cup peach liqueur
½ teaspoon almond extract
Confectioners sugar

For crust: Preheat oven to 350°F. Combine flours, nuts, sugar, baking powder and spices. Cut in butter until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Press half of mixture onto bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Cake 12 minutes. Refrigerate remaining crumb mixture.

For filling: Beat cheeses in small mixer bowl on high speed until light and fluffy. Beat in remaining ingredients until well blended. Pour over partially baked crust. Return to oven and continue to bake 30 to 35 minutes or until filling is set. Remove from oven and sprinkle remaining crumb mixture evenly over top. Bake 15 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from oven and cool completely on wire rack. Refrigerate, covered, several hours.

To serve: Place on serving plate. Carefully run spatula around edges; remove sides of pan. Dust top of cake lightly with confectioners' sugar.

ANSWER — Lisa Kerrigan, Bath, wanted a recipe for Kosher Dill pickles that taste like the Claussen pickles that are stored in the refrigerator. Thanks to Betty Green and Julia Studwell of Weston, Ct., for sending this recipe.

The first Ice Cream Promenade, "the Best Licking Tour in Town," brought out over 1,000 people and the local media despite 100-degree weather. The event featured a celebrity ice cream making contest with participants from television and radio stations, and the area's local newspaper. The contest included Buzz Barkley (center) and Jennifer Ord (far right), from WMMR-FM, who worked with youngsters from United Cerebral Palsy to create the "Chocolate Chip Cheesecake Project." The entire Promenade sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program raised over $1,000 for United Cerebral Palsy of the Philadelphia area.

SUN PICKLES

1 gallon glass jar
20 cucumbers (enough to fill jar)
1 bunch fresh dill
1 bulb garlic
2 slices rye bread
Boiling water with a handful of Kosher salt added

Boil enough salted water to fill jar. Wash and cut ends off cukes. Cross cut cukes halfway on both ends.

Pack into jar with the dill and garlic. Cover with salted boiling water and put 2 or 3 slices of seeded rye bread on top and cover jar loosely, with aluminum foil, if you like. Set in sun for three days.

Remove all traces of bread and store pickles in refrigerator in their juice.

Bring jar in every night if you have wild animals around. They love pickles.

ANSWER — Jessie Mayall, Mansfield, wanted a good recipe for a potato bun that has frosting drizzle on top. Thanks to Marlene Sauder, Bowmansville, for sending a recipe that she received from her sister-in-law Minerva Sauder, who is currently recuperating from surgery.

Potato Refrigerator Rolls

1½ cups water
1 tablespoon yeast
⅔ cup sugar
1½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
⅔ cup oil
1 cup mashed potatoes
6-8 cups flour (hi-gluten or bread flour)
1 cup raisins, optional

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Add next five ingredients and whisk everything together. Slowly add flour and stir. Add only enough flour to make dough manageable. Knead several minutes. Place in greased bowl. Let rise until double in bulk. Punch dough down, shape into rolls. Place on cookie sheets and let rise again. Bake at 350 degrees for 15-20 minutes or until golden brown.

Hint: add enough flour to make a sticky dough; cover and let set for 10 minutes before adding remaining flour. This allows the water to be absorbed by the flour. You will use less flour and have a moist yeast bread.

Glaze:

Start with 1½ cups confectioners' sugar. Slowly add water until you have the consistency for drizzling.

¼ cup butter
1½ cups thinly sliced leeks
1 medium baking potato
14 ounces chicken broth
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground white pepper
4 medium ears corn
2½ cups buttermilk
¼ cup diced red bell pepper
⅓ cup chopped fresh basil leaves
Salt, if desired
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chives or green onion tops

Saute leeks in butter until softened, about 10 minutes. Peel potato and cut into ½ -inch pieces. Add to saucepan with leeks. Stir in broth, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 20 to 25 minutes or until potato is tender. Puree in blender. Cool; cover and chill for 4 hours or overnight. To roast corn, place ears on grid over medium coals. Grill 10 to 12 minutes or until browned, turning occasionally. Or, place corn on rack of broiler pan and broil 2 to 3 inches from heat source for 8 to 10 minutes, turning every 2 minutes. Cool; cut kernels off cobs (about 2 cups). Remove soup from refrigerator 30 minutes prior to serving. Combine soup, buttermilk, corn kernels, red bell pepper and basil; mix well. Add salt, if desired. Ladle into soup bowls, sprinkle with chives, if desired.

If desired, 2 cups cooked corn kernels may be substituted for the roasted corn, but the flavor will vary.

Clearville Woman Raises Texel Sheep

Inci Willard thinks she is the first Pennsylvanian to raise Texel sheep, which, according to Inci, you can shut them in a pen, feed them anything, and they will still develop only muscle. They are extremely docile and lamb easily, but expensive.

By LINDA WILLIAMS

CLEARVILLE (Bedford Co.) - Inci Willard is a long ways from her native country of Turkey.

But, she's as happy as a flea on a coon dog contentedly raising sheep on a small farm near Everett.

Inci was working as a broadcaster for BBC when she spent a weekend in the country, learned how to grow flowers, and knew that the city was no longer for her.

She has a flock of 32 sheep including Cheviot and North Country Cheviots, Scots Half-breed, Border Leister and Texel. "I think I am the first person in Pennsylvania to have Texel sheep," Inci says.

Pointing out the beefy 7-month-old animal in a pen at the recent Bedford County Sheep and Wool Field Day, Inci explains that Texels will weigh between 250 and 350 pounds at maturity.

"I read about them for a long time before getting one for myself," Inci explains. "They are great sheep. You can shut them in a pen, feed them anything, and they will still develop only muscle. They are extremely docile and they lamb easily."

Texels were originally imported from Holland but were in quarantine until 1992 due to foot rot and sore mouth disease. However, they are now free of disease.

"The main drawback at this time is the price. "Last year a ram sold in Missouri for $5,000," she said. Inci plans to attend a large Texel sale in Missouri in August.

"I talked with the man who is having the auction," she said. "And, he was affected by the flood waters they have been having there. I told him not to worry. Just pack up your sheep and bring the auction here. I do seriously hope to be able to have my own auction here some day."

In addition to her sheep, Inci has two Border collies to help with herding.

"I also grow flowers," she says beaming. "Lots and lots of flowers. I love living in the country."

Inci's husband, John is a real estate developer and raises Christmas trees on their Clearville farm.

Day Campers Learn About The Community

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A sun-splashed day greeted 312 children who attended the 4-H Summer Day Camp recently.

Lancaster County Park was the site where the day campers participated in fun-filled activities under the theme "Getting to Know Your Community."

Firemen and ambulance workers taught the children how to deal with disasters. A fire trailer was parked on the grounds and groups of students took turns entering the trailer and settling in the nooks and crannies of the small rooms. Then smoke was piped into the trailer and fire alarms shrilled. The children needed to crawl and feel their way to safety.

Most of the campers enjoyed crawling through the maze and feeling for the door where they could escape in safety. They knew this was not a real fire, but an activity to teach them how to escape from a real fire.

Eight-year-old Kevin Rice of Elizabethtown said that escaping from a fire was old stuff for him. He said he had to escape from two fires in real life. He eagerly told his fellow campers how he dialed 911 and that he could not awaken his dad until the fire sirens sounded.

"I think it is a good thing to have this fire trailer," he said. "So we learn how to escape from fires."

Five-year-old Erica cools off by eating ice cream.

Ambulance workers explained how the ambulance helps people and that it is nothing to be afraid of even though the siren sounds scary.

On the other side of the field 11-year-old Jessica Schmidt and her mother, Laurie, told the campers all about raising sheep.

"Look, each of you are wearing a name tag today," Laurie told the campers. The sheep have their ears pierced and wear ear tags so people can identify them."

She told how the lamb Pepper needed to be bottle fed five times a day because the mother ewe could not take care of him.

Some of the campers had never had the opportunity to pet a sheep before. Seven-year-old Jonathan Jaynes loved to pet the woolly coats. He said, "The big sheep feels like a rug, and the little one feels like a carpet."

In another area of the park, campers watched as Penn Laurel Girl Scout Council presented a puppet show on learning disabilities.

"I like the puppet show best because it shows how each person is special," said one of the campers.

"The neat thing about 4-H Day Camp," said Zoann Parker, 4-H extension agent, is the diversity of youth organizations that participate. There is cooperation and acceptance with everyone. Four-H is for everyone."

Of the games and activities planned, Parker said, "It's really an educational experience, although the kids aren't aware of it, the games are really teaching the children the importance of cooperation."

As Laurie Schmidt, right, explains the care that sheep require, a 4-H'er caps the Dorset's head with a baseball cap.

Day campers peer through the window to see how smoke rises about two to three feet above the ground. The Lancaster County Fireman's Association set up the fire trailer to teach kids fire safety.

This day camp activity teaches children the importance of working together.

The outdoor pavilion is flavored with the aroma of grilled hot dogs and friendship.

Pa. Apple Queen Believes Ag Should Attract More Attention

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

WAYNESBORO (Franklin Co.) — "The ag community needs to have more attention. America is getting away from the farming industry. Agriculture is 20 percent of the Gross National Product; we need to make it higher. Ag is basic to me, but many people in the cities don't understand it," Franklin County Apple Queen Heidi Martin told the audience at the Pennsylvania Apple Queen pageant.

She made her remarks in response to the question, "Do you believe that a strong agriculture industry is important to our society?"

About 60 people attended the event, held at the Savoy Restaurant July 20.

Master of Ceremonies Elliott Schlosser also asked Heidi, "If you are named state queen, what would you like to accomplish during your reign?"

"It seems so much bigger than Franklin County," Heidi, who wore a peach-colored dress, replied. "I would promote apples to kids in schools. I'd like to go on the radio. When the message is said over and over, people will go out and buy apples. I'd like to take turns with other commodity queens writing articles for the newspapers."

"I feel like a great weight has been lifted from my shoulders," Heidi said after the pageant. As state queen, Heidi received a check for $200.

A fifth-generation member of the family who operates Tracey's Orchard near Greencastle, Heidi has been involved with fruit all her life. She is the daughter of Randy and Sandi Martin.

Her grandparents, Ralph and Connie Tracey, were her sponsors. Heidi helps to sell the fruit at the orchard's sales shed from June through Christmas.

A recent graduate of Greencastle-Antrim High School, Heidi was a member of the National Honor Society and the yearbook staff. She hopes to find a job in the business field.

Crowned Pennsylvania Apple Princess was Brandy Carey, 18, Adams County Apple Queen. Brandy is the daughter of Philip and Linda Carey of York Springs. A graduate of Bermudian Springs High School, Brandy is a volunteer with the York Springs ambulance corps and enjoys horseback riding and softball. She is active in Girl Scouting and 4-H. Brandy will spend the next year promoting Adams County apples and attending the Hanover Licensed Practical Nursing program. She received a check for $100.

Judges for the event were Barbara Diefenderfer, who conducts apple promotions for the Maryland State Apple Commission; Shawn Hardy, Greencastle Bureau chief for The Record Herald; and Darby Shaffer, mayor of Biglerville. Emcee Schlosser, a former fruit grower, is an employee of Knouse Foods in Gardners.

Apple Queen committee chairpersons were Sandy Kime, Adams County, and Carole Tracey, Franklin County.

In her farewell speech, 1992 Pennsylvania Apple Queen Jennifer Witmer of Franklin County said that she had had a busy and rewarding year, adding that the high points of her reign were attending the Pennsylvania State Farm Show and the Shenandoah Apple Festival in Shenandoah, Virginia.

"The people in this industry are special," she said, "I have a deep respect for all those in the apple industry."

Dairy Council Donates Children's Books

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — In partnership with the Downtown Kiwanis Club, Dairy Council of Southampton, has donated new books on dairy and nutrition to the Coyle Free Children's Library in Chambersburg. Colorful books were made available to teach the importance of agriculture and balanced nutrition to young children.

Dairy Council and the Downtown Kiwanis Club celebrated the occasion recently, by holding a book donation ceremony, "Books and Food Help Me GROW." Over 60 children and their parents attended the event and were treated to an original story told by professional storyteller, Richard Ezell. Stickers, balloons, coloring books, nutrition materials, and free ice cream were also given to the kids on this fun day. Beth Fairchild, children's librarian, accepted the 27 new books from the Kiwanis and Dairy Council.

Through this project with the Downtown Kiwanis, the Dairy Council nutrition education message will continue to reach children in a fun and educational way.

Jennifer Brenneman Reigns For Second Term

Gay N. Brownlee
Somerset Co. Correspondent

GARRETT CO., Md. — She's already served one term as the dairy princess of Garrett and Allegny Counties, virtually as a one-princess army, to generate increased interest in local dairy promotion. Because there's no one to take her place, Jennifer Brenneman of the Bittinger-Accident area, has agreed to keep the job for a second term.

At age 18, princess Jennifer knows dairy almost as well as any expert and holds her own in related discussions. It's very simple according to Jennifer who seems to posses a God-given understanding of the bovine set and the cows seem to realize she's their freiend.

"I always thought it was neat, all that the princesses got to do," she said, "and I wanted to participate. I wanted to give back something to dairy in my county ."

She saw the princess position as being a wonderful asset and opportunity to accomplish that ideal. But without a local contest, such as those held in many counties, Jennifer says she had to make telephone calls to approach the correct people before she was able to volunteer herself as the Allegany-Garrett Co. dairy princess.

And her sky-rocketing number of promotions nearly quadrupled the required 42. On her own, she whirlwinded through 170 promotions, often personally, partially financing them all because the dedicated princess believes so strongly in the dairy program.

School children proved to be the best recipients of the princess's hard work. And Jennifer says she couldn't be more delighted than when a youngster rushes up to her and says proudly, "'I know you. you visited my school.'"

She's done radio spos, witten newspaper articles, attended meetings, special events, and supermarkets, plus made farm and nonfarm appearances.

Incredibly, Jennifer believes that she can do better during this second reign. Why isn't she satisfied some may ask- what's she trying to prove?

The very experienced milk maid says, "I have so much experience and I really like it. I'm not sure how long I'll be in dairy, so I thought while I'm in it, I'm going to put everythging in it that I can." Her goal she said, is to double over last year, this year's number of promotions.

For as long as she can remember, Jennifer has worked in the barn on the farm of her parents, Richard and Regina Brenneman. Today 14 dairy cows are hers. Three of them are registered Guernseys; the others, Holsteins.

And she's raising another veal calf to show at the Garrett Co. Fair in early August, in hopes of taking the title again of grand champion, as she did in 1992.

"Quiz" her Tennessee walker horse is aptly dubbed for his tempermental personality. Her cats are named Kitty, Boots, White Socks and Tommy. Bebe is her rabbit.

Once a very shy young woman, princess Jennifer says she has gained much self-confidence during her reign, especially since participating in the Mayland state pageant held last summer at Fredrick. Reportedly, officials there were impressed by her keen knowledge of dairy facts.

"It was different for someone who was shy," she said. "Everybody was so nice and the contest wasn't too hard. It was working up to it (that was hard)," she said, laughing.

"I'm a lot braver and more outgoing," she announced from her regal perch on the rear seat of a 1993 convertible, just prior to gracing the long, popular, Grantsville Days parade. The celebration lasts three days,.

Surrounding her were stuffed toy Holstein cows and individually wrapped candies in a big box, ready to be tossed to children flanking the parade rout. A breeze caughty at her long brunette hair, frustrating her efforts to securly attach her sliding crown. Encased in royal blue silkiness, the princess's dress was perfectly foiled by the gleaming white of the open-top coupe in which she rode.

Jennifer says that the making of new friends is one of the best parts of being a dairy princess. She has also found herself better equipped to deal with people in general.

"I still don't go looking for crowds," she says, "but now I can handle them."

Jennifer says the most disheartening part of her reign was trying to interest the farmers themselves to work toward a stronger local dairy promotion program.

"I want the dairy farmers to do more in letting the public know," she said. And she wants to see more youngsters getting into the program as dairy maids and ambassadors.

Dairy Princess Jennifer Brenneman, representing Maryland counties Allegany and Garrett, sits atop a 1993 convertible, where she is ready to toss candy to children as she rides in a parade.

Before parade time in Grantsville, Md., the dairy princess of Allegany and Garrett Co. Md., Jennifer Brenneman, chats with Brock and Whitney Glotfelty, children of Randy and Renatta Glotfelty of Grantsville.

'Everyday Is Sundae' Comes To Center City Philadelphia

TOWSON, Md. — When "Everyday Is Sundae" comes to center city Philadelphia it is a dessert lovers paradise. About 18,000 people gathered on Independence Mall, Wednesday, June 23, for three hours of ice cream, frozen yogurt, or drinks such as milk-based "Killer Shakes" and yogurt-based, "Pastels". Hershey's Chocolate provided chocolate and strawberry syrups and Wissahickon Spring Water provided cool spring water.

The seventh annual "Everyday Is Sundae" was co-sponsored by Philadelphia's premier country music station, WXTU-FM 92.5, which provided music and prizes.

Sampling their finest products were Kemps, Jack & Jill, Turkey Hill, Nirvana, Breyers, Good Humor, Bassett's, Cuberland Dairy, Pastels and Wissahickon Spring Water.

The four manufacturers who have participated since the inception of this event seven years ago were honored by MAMMA. Representatives from Turkey Hill, Jack & Jill, Bassett's and Breyers were presented with eye-catching black & white spotted "cow" caps at the event.

More than 2,500 coupons were also given away to consumers. Each coupon was worth $2.50 toward the consumers next purchase of ice cream as part of the summer ice cream campaign, a joint effort between Hershey's, the American Dairy Association and the National Dairy Board.

MAMMA organizes Philadelphia's annual ice cream fest so manufacturers can showcase their products by putting items directly into the hands of the consumer.

FFA HAPPENINGS

Chestnut Ridge FFA

June 15, 16, and 17 meant a lot of time and hard work to nine members and the adviser of the Chestnut Ridge FFA Chapter.

During those three days, they traveled to Penn State University to compete with numerous FFA chapters from all across the state in many agricultural contests. Not only did they compete, but they had a great time making new friends, learning more about their future in agriculture, and how to be positive leaders, playing an active roll in the Pennsylvania State FFA Chapter, and establishing a respective reputation for Chestnut Ridge.

Contest winners were awarded not only individual placings, but team and chapter placings along with gold, silver, and bronze certificates. Michael Draeger of Alum Bank won seventh place out of 71 participants, receiving a gold certificate for land judging.

Joann Bence of Schellsburg also participated in land judging. Domenick Puleo of New Paris won sixth place and a gold certificate, Tracy Henderson of Schellsburg won eighth place and a gold certificate, Aaron Corle of Osterburg won 17th place and a silver certificate, Laurie Bero of Alum Bank won 28th place, Jason Mickle of Alum Bank won 55th place, Bill Miller of Schellsburg won 62nd place — all out of 81 participants in the Livestock Judging competition.

A team comprised of Domenick Puleo, Tracy Henderson, and Laurie Bero finished in third place as livestock judgers. Tressa Felix of Fishertown won twenty-fourth place out of 50 participants in pleasure horse judging. Laurie Bero and Tracy Henderson both received gold certificates for participation in the Pennsylvania State FFA Chorus.

Domenick Puleo represented the Chestnut Ridge FFA as 1992 chapter reporter by receiving a first place, gold certificate, and champion scrapbook plaque for a chapter scrapbook contest with 17 Pennsylvania Chapters participating. Chestnut Ridge FFA also received a Keystone certificate for donating money, raised by their candy bar sale in the fall, to the FFA Foundation.

Many countless hours were spent preparing for the state FFA competition. FFA members worked together to create a champion scrapbook and to achieve personal goals in their own contest.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Now that we finally had a little rain, the corn is growing tall between our house and a busy highway. Soon the sound of cars and trucks will be deadened and we will feel isolated again.

I plant seven kinds of beans and then even if we have dry weather, I'll still have an ample supply. In fact, there are quite a few quarts in the freezer from last year. And, my husband planted sweet corn at five different times and so I'll be freezing corn all summer long.

Despite the work at home, he persuaded me to go on a two-day fishing trip. We took our boat to Beltzville Lake in Carbon County and found that many people had arrived before us. The fish weren't biting and so we had our lunch while we waited.

When I finally caught a fish, it was almost stolen from me. It was in a net bag that hung over the side of the boat. We had drifted close to the shore as I enjoy seeing the plants and flowers that are different from Lancaster County plants. Anyway, I heard a slight noise and saw a long, tan snake pulling the fish to the land. But, we got it back.

A storm came up in the afternoon and all of the boats tried to get out of the water at one time which was impossible. Most people were dressed for the occasion and got their bathing suits and themselves soaked. Allen had a raincoat to wear as he removed all of our paraphernalia from the boat to our truck. So many things — life preservers, fishing rods, tackle boxes, food container, thermos jug and even oars in case the electric motor gives out. Even so we'll probably go again.

FROM BARN-YARD TO HAY FIELD... "THE SOLID INVESTMENT"

When it comes to building a rugged farm tractor, Case IH wrote the book. Just like its larger brothers, our Model 695 (62 PTO HP), 895 (72 PTO HP) & 995 (85 PTO HP), provides the versatility of barn-yard chores and weight to handle a big roll baler in the field.

With a forward/reverse shuttle transmission available on both 2WD and 4WD models or an optional 16 speed power shift, you can "make hay" while the sun shines.

Truely, a solid investment for today and tomorrow.

FFA Exchange At Lebanon Fair

Eiichi Karguchi, 17, from Oita, an, visited the Lebanon Fair ine Show with hosts Lois and Meyer and family.

Eiichi is president of his Future rmers of Japan (FFJ) chapter, country equivalent of the FFA America.

Eiichi has been involved in FFJ four years. He is spending two weeks in the U.S. through the efforts of the National FFA Association and Dover FFA to learn more about large-scale agriculture in this country.

The FFJ president was impressed with the size of the shows at the fair, and the large facilities, which dwarf many in his home country. He helps his family grow rice and vegetables near Oita.

Eiichi is part of the nationwide FFA/FFJ exchange program.

National FFA Scholarship Goes To Local Student

A nationwide search among the ntry's best and brightest stu- ts yielded a local winner.

Recognizing the need to invest excellence, the National FFA anization recently announced Kraig Sellers of the Little chmen is the recipient of a ,000 scholarship.

The scholarship is sponsored by tgers-Nease Chemical Co. as a cial project of the National A Foundation.

Sellers will use the funds to pursue a degree in dairy and animal science at Penn State.

Sellers, son of Kenneth and Karen Sellers of R.D. 4, Lebanon received notice of the scholarship after a national panel judged Sellers's application among the best in the nation. Judging criteria included an evaluation of Sellers's supervised agricultural experience program in agricultural education, FFA activities, school and community involvement, high school grades and career plans.

Sellers's FFA advisor is Lowell Morton.

Cool, Composed Exhibitors Capture Lead Line Contest

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Spectators were fanning themselves. Others, milling about in the excessive heat, were sipping cool drinks. All this while two Lebanon Fair Lead Line exhibitors calmly and assuredly walked, clothed in wool, gracefully to a championship.

Wearing a 100 percent wool olive green turtleneck pullover, with almond plad knickers and matching socks and loafers, Ann Leed picked up first place and junior champion at the Lead Line Show on Tuesday.

Ann, 11, daughter of Bob and Nancy Leed, Meyerstown, an Elco Middle School sixth grader, held securely to the reins of her Hampshire spring ewe all during the show.

Leah Bomberger easily picked up senior championship wearing her 100 percent wool royal blue jacket, with her wool/polyester plad pants of fushia, black, and royal blue. Because she knew the weather would be oppressive for a nearly all-wool show, Leah also sported a black cotton tank top and gold necklace.

Leah, 15, daughter of Sven and Kathy Bomberger, Fredericksburg, held the reins of her Hampshire yearling ewe, Honey, during the show. Leah is president of her 4-H sheep club and an FFA member.

The race was close throughout, with the first and second place decided by less than three points. Second place in the junior show went to Janine Winebark, 9, and third to Nathan Tice, 8.

In all, there were a total of three exhibitors for the junior and one for the senior show.

Judges of the event were Ann Staver, Nancy Thompson, and Henry Emerich.

WHAT IS BIOSECURITY?

Dr. Michael Hulet
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

Biosecurity refers to a system for protecting animals from infectious disease-causing agents. The system consists of ways of cleaning houses, sanitizing houses, and control of people and equipment that come in contact with your animals.

While complete biosecurity involves total isolation and sterilization of all materials with which an animal would come into contact, this is an impractical and impossible manner for raising farm animals. However, a practical goal is to reduce the number of bacteria and other disease causing organisms from reaching your poultry flocks.

Most healthy flocks can resist small numbers of disease organisms. The problem is when a flock is either at a stage of lowered resistance or when a large number of disease organisms overpower the natural disease resistance and create a challenge for the flock.

As you review the following recommendations, envision how you can implement and improve the biosecurity for your poultry flocks.

Cleanliness

As cleanliness is next to godliness, it is also a fundamental rule of biosecurity.

The method of cleaning is divided into two different situations:

- 1) total clean-out after marketing
- 2) partial cleaning after marketing.

For a total cleaning, all litter is removed. A producer must move the litter far enough away from the poultry houses (greater than 100 yards) to prevent recontamination of the clean building. One must also clean up all litter that has been spilled in the yard to prevent the manure from being picked up by your cleaning equipment or farm workers and transported back into your clean house.

Next, efforts must be made to remove dust from floors, lighting fixtures, fan blades, and louvers (high pressure air or water, sweeping, etc.). Clean all foreign matter from equipment (feeders, feed bins, waterers, etc.), windows, curtains (both sides), walls, ceilings, etc. and then wash thoroughly with high pressure water sprayers.

Next, systematically disinfect with an approved detergent-containing sanitizer. Most sanitizers are inactivated in the presence of organic matter; therefore, the disinfectants are only effective when the surfaces are clean. The addition of a compatible detergent acts as a wetting agent for the disinfectant.

For common terminology, sanitizers reduce microbial numbers and inhibit their growth while disinfectants kill microorganisms. Many chemicals commonly used for cleaning and sanitizing poultry houses are alcohols, cresols, chlorines, iodophors, synthetic phenols, quaternary ammoniums, aldehydes, glutaraldehydes, and detergents. The effectiveness of a disinfectant is determined by dilution, length of contact, temperature, susceptibility of the microorganism, the number of organisms present, and the amount of organic matter present. Some recommend increasing contact time by the addition of a detergent or the use of foaming agents in addition to the disinfectants. Thus, the goal is to clean all surfaces thoroughly, then use an effective disinfectant in the prescribed manner to reduce microbial presence. Cleanout is also an ideal time to spray for insects and bait for rodents.

A partial cleanout is intended to reduce the bacterial load, clean the equipment, and prepare the house for the next flock. Since the greatest bacterial load (the litter) is still left in the building, only the wet litter (cake) is removed. Sweeping and thorough cleaning of equipment (fans, feeders, waterers, louvers, etc.) is still recommended as part of a good preventative maintenance as well as biosecurity procedure.

Water lines should be emptied, cleaned using a line sanitizer, and flushed between each flock. After the litter is dry, insecticide and/or any other litter treatment (to reduce ammonia) should be applied if needed. Reconditioned litter is sometimes top-dressed with fresh litter in areas where broilers are brooded. Because of the longer growing cycle and greater risk, turkeys are not commonly brooded on old litter.

Between flocks an important part of breaking any disease cycle is desiccation (drying) and heat. Downtime is thought to be an opportune time to let mother nature and her sunlight (ultraviolet light) reduce the bacterial load. Ten days or two weeks between flocks is the recommended downtime. This time loss is not much to sacrifice when you consider the consequences of a disease outbreak — depopulation, extensive cleanup costs, loss of income, increased medication and vaccination costs, not to mention decreased bird growth and increased feed conversion.

People And Equipment

After making all the effort and cost to clean and sanitize, it makes no sense not be limit and monitor people and equipment traffic to and from your houses.

transmission are contaminated human feet, hands, and clothes; dust, feathers, and manure on equipment and supplies; feral and wild birds; and predators, rodents, and insects.

I once knew a man who changed coveralls and shoes between each flock, but wore the same dusty hat wherever he went. All traffic should go from youngest to oldest birds on a farm and people should change footwear, clothing, and head gear between different flocks.

If you have handled birds such as picking up mortalities, wash your hands before going to another house. Timely and consistent removal of dead birds can also prevent spread of disease.

Only visitors who have business in your house should be allowed to enter, and then only after being freshly dressed to protect your birds from disease transfer. Foot pans for each house are a good idea when properly maintained. If not routinely cleaned and refilled, the organic matter inactivates the disinfectant or the bacterial load can overcome the effectiveness of the disinfectant and allow your foot pan to be a source of disease spread instead of disease prevention.

Since predators, rodents, and other birds are a risk to your flock, care must be taken to prevent their entrance. A consistent rodent program of baiting, checking bait, and rebaits on a monthly schedule is a must.

Removal of grass, brush, stored equipment, hay bales, or old buildings near your houses will limit nesting sites and discourage rodent populations. Monthly raising and lowering of curtains during the summer will discourage nesting mice and prevent damage to your curtains.

Good preventive maintenance of screens and checking around your houses for fresh burrows and uninvited animal movement are essential to discourage birds, predators, and rat visits. Proper disposal of dead birds in an approved manner so that scavengers aren't able to get to them will prevent them from being sources of disease transfer.

In conclusion, the practice of biosecurity is an attitude of using good common sense approaches to preventing disease entrance or spread. On your farms, develop the attitude "no disease will enter my farm and no disease will spread to my neighbors." Then adopt management practices that support that attitude.

Judge Asks Spectators To Appreciate Time, Efforts Of Lebanon Hog Champions

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Near the conclusion of the Lebanon Fair Swine Show on Monday, the show judge told the parents of the exhibitors to come down to the show ring and hug their kids.

"Parents often take it all for granted, all the long hours and sweat," said Frank Feeser, choking back tears. He urged the spectators to try to "appreciate all the time the kids give" to raising hogs in an increasingly tough climate which pushes producers to the limit just to survive.

Before it was all said and done, Feeser spoke about how producers must look to the priorities of producing a hog that consumers and packers demand, "the kind of hog that the producer needs to stay in business." He pointed in the direction of the hog shown by Scott Nolt, 17, son of Allen and Carol Nolt, Lebanon.

The Cedar Crest High School senior exhibited a 245-pound Hampshire/Yorkshire cross. Scott has been showing about five years, and attributes the market champion to "good quality feed and taking care of it." The hog, according to Scott, was purchased from Leon Arnold.

Feeser said that producers have a lot of responsibilities, having to spend so much time and effort in taking care of the animals, cleaning the pens out, and other tasks that not every day is a bunch of 'roses."

Feeser, who manages about 1,600 head of Hampshires, Durocs, and Yorkshires at his Taneytown, Md. farrow-to-finish operation, said the reserve champion "makes us proud" as producers in delivering the type of hog necessary for the market.

Feeser awarded reserve to Roxanne Kirst, 17, daughter of Roger and Fern Kirst, Fredericksburg. The North Lebanon High School senior exhibited a 256-pound Yorkshire cross. Roxanne has been showing hogs since she was 8 years old, and picked up her first reserve championship swine since exhibiting at the fair. She said the hog was purchased from Henry Holloway.

Champion of the Duroc show went to Janine Winebark. Champion of the Hampshire class went to Jason Krall, and reserve to Kevin Sellers. Spotted Swine champion was Leah Arnold. Yorkshire champion was Jeramiah Arnold, and reserve went to Marc Arnold.

Horses Offered For Adoption

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — On August 14, 125 healthy and trainable wild horses recently rounded up from fragile western rangelands will be offered for adoption at the Horse Park of New Jersey in Allentown, N.J. The adoption is sponsored by the Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management.

Since the Adopt-A-Horse Program began in 1973, more than 132,838 animals have been adopted to more than 60,680 people.

Wild horses are gathered in Nevada, Wyoming, California, Utah, and Oregon. Before being transported to satellite adoption centers in the East and Midwest, all animals are vaccinated, blood tested, and dewormed. Each animal is inspected by a veterinarian and given a clean bill of health before being shipped.

To qualify to adopt up to four animals, applicants must have a sturdy corral at least six feet high, shelter, transportation, and means of caring for the animals. The adoption fee of $125 per horse is payable in cash or money order at the time of the adoption. The fee helps defray the federal government's cost of roundup, veterinary care, transportation, and administrative expenses. After an animal has been adopted, bureau contract personnel will halter and load the animal for the adopter.

The horses will arrive at the Horse Park between the hours of 8 a.m.-10 a.m. on Friday, August 13. Viewing hours are 1 p.m.-5 p.m. The scheduled hours for the adoption will be from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday and, if any remain, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Sunday.

For applications and more information about this event, contact Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 631, Milwaukee, WI., 53201-0631, (414) 297-4417.

White Oak Mills Completes Mill

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — In response to a major shift toward advanced technology of the feed business, White Oak Mills, a rapidly growing supplier of swine, dairy and beef feeds, recently completed one of three phrases to expand its mill.

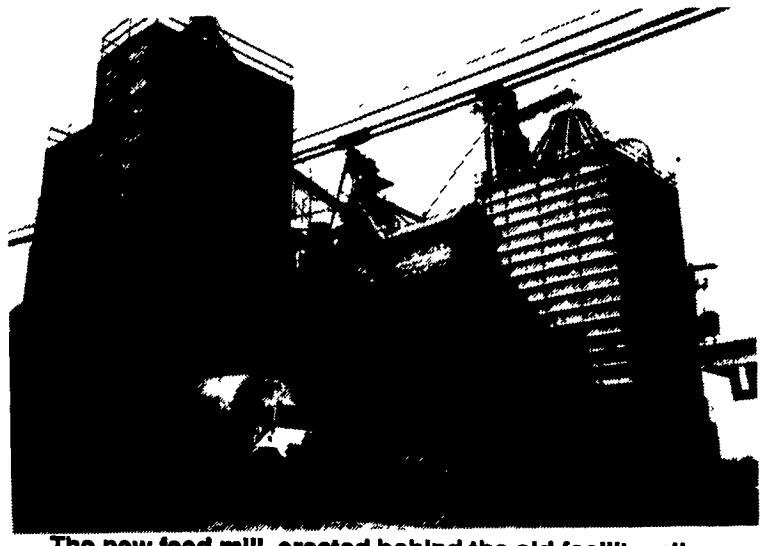
Now furnished with a new, relatively dust-free, state-of-the-art facility, White Oak Mills has increased production, refined its quality feed, and improved working conditions for its employees.

Last October, White Oak Mills initiated plans to construct a new feed mill, and on June 7 the company finished Phase I of its expansion project and began operation.

Vice President Mark Wagner said, "With feed being mixed primarily through weigh buggies, our old feed mill was very labor-intense." The new mill, which includes a computerized batching system, mixes feed ingredients automatically with greater accuracy than the old plant, provides a more consistent mix, and allows White Oak Mills to better serve its customers.

Previously producing 80,000 tons of feed per year, White Oak Mills can yield 200,000 tons per year with its new feed plant. This means textured dairy and meal hog feeds, formerly mixed at a rate of 12 tons per hour, now are being made at 40 to 45 tons per hour, said Ken Heisey, mill manager for White Oak Mills.

In addition, White Oak now is more efficient in all aspects of feed production and can provide faster service to its customers by fulfilling their needs, completing their orders, and delivering feed in a shorter time period.



The new feed mill, erected behind the old facility, allows White Oak Mills to be more efficient, and therefore provide faster service to its customers.

Because of the plant's greater efficiency and larger capacity, Jorge Estrada, director of dairy nutrition, stresses that the new mill allows the company to manufacturer higher-quality and more-consistent feed. It also lets White Oak Mills make use of ingredients not used before in its feed rations.

While expansion and renovation projects advance White Oak Mills up the ladder in competitive feed markets, Estrada emphasizes White Oak's number one priority — its customers.

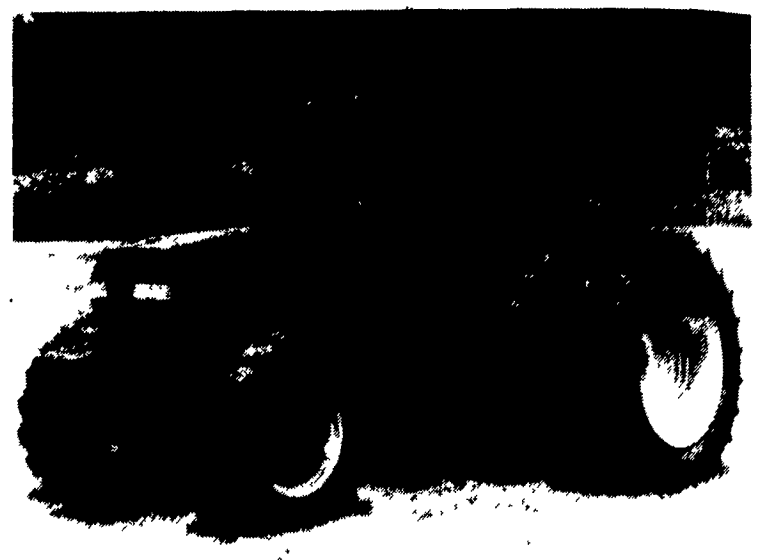
"One noteworthy point about White Oak Mills' expansion is that we have the business, that is, sales and tonnage, to build a new mill, which in turn allows feed prices to remain constant for our customers ... and our ingredient quality-assurance program allows White Oak Mills to keep a consistent supply of ingredients to formulate consistent feeds," he said.

"To fulfill our customer's needs, White Oak Mills' sales force, both swine and dairy, provides special attention to individual customers through regular visits, by aiding in nutrition and management situations, and by troubleshooting problems at individual farms," Estrada said.

Also, White Oak offers complete feeds, concentrates, and mineral premixes, as well as fully-customized feeds.

Meanwhile, Phase I does not satiate all White Oak Mill's expansion needs. Phases II and III will consist of upgraded electrical and new boiler installation, rail-receiving facilities, and the addition of a new pellet mill, a new drive-thru load-out facility, a new truck garage, grain processing facilities and extra grain bins, all of which is to be completed within the next 12 to 15 months.

For more information or to receive a copy of White Oak Mill's customer newsletter, please contact Jennifer Walter at (800) 468-5524.



Delivering 112 PTO horsepower, the new Case International Maxxum 5250 tractor is the largest in the Maxxum line of four models. It incorporates enhancements just announced for the Maxxum Series, including an all-glass door and optional Goodyear DT 710 radial tires which provide a good combination of traction and a smooth ride.

B&H Introduces New Maxxum Tractor

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. announces the introduction of a new Case International 5250 Maxxum tractor that tops the series with 112 PTO horsepower. They also announced enhancements to both Maxxum and Magnum Series tractors.

"The 5250 has all the features customers like about the Maxxum tractor. Transmissions match power to the job, and the unique power-shuttle shift goes from forward to reverse without clutching for greater efficiency in operations such as loader work," according to B&H. "With the added horsepower, the 5250 competes favorably with other tractors over 100 horsepower. The customer gets 7,700 pounds of hitch-lift capacity from this machine."

Other features of the 5250 include cantilever-mounted engine, heavy-cast side rails for front-end strength and a heavy weight-to-horsepower ratio, 6-inch box beam front axle on the two-wheel-drive model and optional 3.5 inch bar-type rear axles. The 5250 is powered by the Case 6T-590 engine.

According to B&H, the new Maxxum 5250 tractor also incorporates several enhancements that are now available for the entire Maxxum Series. "Case has taken a product that was already considered the best in the field and made it better," said B&H.

Besides bringing in the more powerful 5250, they've increased horsepower on the other three Maxxum tractors. The 5220 now delivers 80 horsepower, the 5230 delivers 90, and the 5240 delivers 100 horsepower.

Other improvements to the line include the introduction of an all-glass door, repositioned mirrors, swivel seat, in-cab hydraulic flow controls, fender-mounted hitch controls, and offset drawbar.

Good visibility has been a key trait of Maxxum tractors, and now with the all-glass door and repositioned mirrors, the operator gets even better visibility to the sides and rear of the tractor.

Three other additions to the Maxxum tractors make it easier to use implements. Optional in-cab flow controls let the operator adjust the hydraulic flow to two sets of couplers from inside the cab. That's especially handy for the farmer who's using spraying equipment with orbital motors.

Optional electronic controls located outside the cab on both rear fenders raise and lower the hitch, making it easier to hook up implements. The offset drawbar further adds to ease of hookup.

One additional feature of the 5200 Series is the option of factory-installed Goodyear DT 710 radial tires. This new tire design provides a good combination of traction and a smoother ride. This is the first time this tire has been offered as original equipment.

"These enhancements are important," according to B&H. "But the true value of a Maxxum tractor is found in the durable, heavy-duty powertrain. Maxxum engines and transmissions are designed and built to provide reliable, long-lasting performance under demanding, heavy-load agricultural operations."

"The changes to the Maxxum line are exceptional, but Case has also improved the popular MAGNUM line." B&H says, "The best thing about these changes is that they reflect the input of our customers. Farmers were telling us that multiple-gear shifting needed to be easier. We passed the message on to Case, and now the transmission control valve's been improved to reduce shift lever effort during shuttle shifting, such as loader work.

"These aren't changes for change's sake," said B&H. "They're improvements driven by customer input. It's great to be supported by a manufacturer that's keeping in touch with customer requirements."

Agway Sales Specialists Attend Session

TULLY, N.Y. — Agway crops sales specialists across the Northeast are now more up-to-date in product knowledge.

For three days, more than 180 individuals learned about Agway's leading edge products and programs such as Early Edge micro nutrients and Fresh Line silage and haylage additives/preservatives to name a few.

Extensive time was spent directly in the field reviewing crop demonstration plots, including tillage and nutrient management, fertilizer practices, and herbicide weed screens. These exercises are important in Agway's continuing efforts to assist sales specialists and, in turn, farmers with more environmentally sound management practices.

Agway strives to work with its members for a complete program based on environmentally compatible products and services. For example, Agway leads the surge toward applying herbicides in parts per acre rather than the traditional pounds per acre application. A corn rootworm research program and demonstration continues in efforts to control this Northeast corn crop pest.

The Agway Crops Training Facility in Tully is the "information action site of the Northeast," according to Agway. Tours of the crop demonstration plots are available. A commercial dairy farm is located at the same site where feed products and farm systems are developed and tested.

Schedule tours by calling Sara Barlass, (315) 683-5734 or Lucille Schnettler, (315) 683-5700.

ABS Solidifies Joint Venture

DEFOREST, Wis. — ABS announced the signing of a 50 percent ownership contract with Elmira ABC, Ltd.

This contract, signed June 25, 1993, establishes a partnership between ABS of Canada, Ltd. and Elmira ABC, Ltd. of Ontario, Canada, a company which owns a bull housing, semen collection, and storage facility and manages St. Jacobs ABC, a farmer-owned A.I. cooperative. St. Jacobs ABC has a Class "A" license to engage in an inseminating business within the province of Ontario. In addition to the right to provide insemination service in the prescribed territory, the license also provides St. Jacobs ABC with the right to sell semen throughout the province and to engage in export sales.

The Elmira ABC/ABS of Canada joint venture will be governed by a board of directors consisting of ABS President Jack Shelton and Doug Brown, previously sole shareholder of Elmira ABC and owner/partner of Browndale Farms of Paris, Ontario.

ABS of Canada's Regional Manager David Melles has been appointed as general manager of the business partnership, responsible for all general business affairs, and all business matters of the St. Jacobs Cooperative. ABS of Canada and St. Jacobs ABC will operate within the same business offices, located at R.R. 1, Elmira, Ontario. Inventory storage space, clerical assistance, and field staff will continue to be shared by both companies.

"This agreement has been met with enthusiasm from breeders on both sides of the border," said Melles. "There has been increased interest in cooperatively importing genetics into the adjacent countries. This agreement enables Canadian breeders to sample ABS sires, while Canadian bulls will now be available for distribution through ABS' global network."

"The joint venture enables ABS of Canada and St. Jacobs ABC to provide a 'full service' A.I. business in the province of Ontario and across Canada," said Jack Shelton. "This relationship will help us better meet the needs of customers around the world by providing a more diverse offering of genetics and related services to the dairy and beef producers. This also allows us to create a totally separate Canadian product line to compete in additional global markets while remaining self-sufficient within a truly Canadian line of genetics."

Central New York Farmers Renew Crop Protection Practices

TULLY, N.Y. — Better environmental practices are a growing concern today. No one knows this better than central New York farmers. They turned out in full force here at the Agway Farm Research Center Crops Training Facility.

Test plot demonstrations were viewed to learn more about various herbicides and how they affect weed varieties. Weed and crop pest control are essential for farmers to produce top yields and profits.

Throughout the day, farmers identified crop management techniques through role playing and group discussions. The group learned to select the right herbicide for weed control within specific crop species. More than 40 farmers participated from a five-county area. Farmers attending received credits toward their N.Y. State Pesticide Applicator License as well.

The Agway Farm Research Center hosts a number of tours and training programs throughout the growing season for individuals and groups. A Vegetable Growers Field Day is scheduled on August 17.

If interested in learning more about crop fertility, tillage management methods, corn rootworm control, and weed control, contact the Agway Farm Research Center for a tour. Tours can be scheduled by contacting Sara Barlass, (315) 683-5734 or Lucille Schnettler, (315) 683-5700.

Boar Sale Aug. 18

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce that plans are being finalized for Pennsylvania's 18th Performance Tested Boar Sale. The sale is scheduled for 6 p.m. Wednesday evening, August 18, at the Ag Arena on the Penn State campus.

This is Wednesday evening during Ag Progress Days, which is held just several miles down Route 45 at Rocksprings.

Many of the more progressive swine breeders in Pennsylvania have consigned a pen consisting of four boars from one sire and from either one or two litters. These boars are delivered when they weigh between 40 and 65 pounds. They are given a one-or two-week adjustment period depending on their weight. After they are put on test, the boars are weighed at least every two weeks and their testing period concludes when the pen weighs an average of 230 pounds.

Average daily gain is calculated. The pen feed efficiencies are determined. The boars are scanned ultrasonically to determine backfat thickness and loineye area. The boars are evaluated for soundness (structural and breeding) by a committee made up of several swine breeders and university swine specialists, and must meet minimum requirements for soundness and underline to be considered for sale. The sale offering will consist of the top 75-percent approximately, by index of the sound boars.

Breeds represented in the test this time are Yorkshire, Duroc, Hampshire, and Landrace.

To request a sale catalog or additional information about the boars, boar sale or the boar testing program, contact Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527 or (814) 865-5857.

GRAZING SYSTEMS

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Penn State

Management of animals on pastures can have strong effects on forage production and persistence, as well as on animal production. Selection of grazing management practices is a key decision in designing a pasture management program. Some important grazing practices are listed below.

• Continuous grazing. The entire pasture area is grazed continuously for periods from six weeks to the whole growing season. This method appears simple because it requires few fences and water sources, and less monitoring of the pasture condition. Uncontrolled continuous grazing uses a fixed stocking rate on a fixed land area and often leads to under- or over-grazing and poor pasture utilization.

Controlled continuous grazing methods try to maintain an optimum grazing pressure. Grazing pressure can be increased by increasing the stocking rate (adding animals) on a pasture or by temporarily fencing out part of a pasture for hay harvest. High grazing pressure may be relieved by removing some animals from the pasture, by allowing access to other pastures or hayfields, or by feeding harvested feed to the animals on pasture. For Kentucky bluegrass and perennial ryegrass, maintain a grazing height of 2 to 3 inches. For tall grasses, maintain a grazing height of 4 to 5 inches.

Close continuous grazing can lower pasture production and decrease persistence of many grasses and legumes. Therefore, it is important to use forage species adapted to continuous grazing.

Clipping pastures with a rotary mower is a good practice if pastures are under grazed and growth gets ahead of the grazing animals. Clipping removes this tall, rank vegetation and encourages new growth of higher quality forage.

Since animals tend to congregate at water, soil nutrients from their wastes become concentrated in one area of the pasture. Providing more than one source of water helps distribute nutrients more widely across the pasture.

To maintain a productive pasture in a continuously grazed system, it is important to avoid overgrazing. During periods of dry weather, remove the animals and give the pasture a rest.

• Rotational grazing. The pasture area is divided into two or more sub pastures, also called "paddocks," with each subpasture being grazed and "rested" in turn. Putting the whole herd in a small paddock results in rapid use of available forage. When a paddock is grazed off, animals are moved to a fresh one, allowing each paddock to be grazed clean and have a rest period. The rest period is critical to the continued productivity of some forage species.

Time that animals are on a paddock is referred to as the grazing period. Time off the paddock is the rest period. Rotational grazing systems vary in design and intensity. Typical rotational grazing systems usually have less than seven paddocks with a grazing period of one to two weeks. Animals will have a high degree of selectivity during the first part of the grazing period. With these lax systems, plants grazed at the beginning of the grazing period are likely to have regrowth that will be eaten before the grazing period is over resulting in lower productivity.

Intensive rotational grazing systems usually have more than seven paddocks with grazing periods of less than one week to as little as one-half day. There is more control of what the animal eats and normally better growth and persistence of pasture plants. When managing an intensive rotational grazing system, it is important to remember that the stocking rate is very high within one paddock and overgrazing can occur very rapidly. Animals must be moved when the available pasture falls below its optimum range. Allow grazing to begin when tall grasses reach 7 to 8 inches, and remove animals when grass heights fall below 3 inches. Begin grazing short grasses such as Kentucky bluegrass or perennial ryegrass when they reach 5 to 6 inches; remove animals when grass heights are 1 to 2 inches. High producing dairy animals may need to be removed from the paddocks before the plants reach these heights to maintain milk production levels.

Rest periods should be based on the growth rate of the pasture and will vary depending on the season and weather conditions (Table 1). Growth rate will be affected by soil productivity and fertility levels. In most pasture systems, areas will vary in soil productivity, and growth rate also varies. Therefore, even within a pasture system rest periods will vary. The best way to manage this situation is to not use a set rotational scheme, but move animals to those paddocks which have reached their optimum available pasture. Keep animals off a particular paddock until it reaches its desired optimum available pasture.

Paddock size depends on the number and class of animals being grazed, the amount of available pasture at the beginning of grazing, and the desired grazing period. Table 2 provides some suggested paddock sizes for intensive rotational grazing. Adjustments may be necessary if the stocking rate changes. For flexibility, the use of temporary interior fences is recommended.

The number of subdivisions needed for a rotational grazing system will depend on the number of days the animals graze in a paddock and the maximum summer rest period needed.

Paddock number = (Max. summer rest period/Grazing period) +1 example: (30 days rest/3 grazing days) +1 = 11 paddocks

Note: Species and class of grazing animal may determine the grazing period. Lactating dairy cows need consistent high-quality forage; therefore, the grazing period may be anywhere from 0.5 to 2 days. Beef cows, brood ewes and most other ruminants do not require as consistent a quality forage and a grazing period of 3 or more days may suffice.

When managing a rotational grazing system, stocking rate and available pasture are still important.

Table 1. Typical paddock rest periods of rotational grazing systems.

Season	Weather conditions	Growth rate	Rest period
Spring	Cool, moist	Fast	10-14 days
Spring	Warm, dry	Medium	14-20 days
Summer	Hot, moist	Slow	30 - 35 days
Summer	Hot, dry	Very slow	40 - 60 days

Table 2. Suggested paddock sizes (acres/animal unit) based on grazing period and available pasture in all intensive rotational grazing system.

-To calculate paddock size, multiple the suggested acres/animal unit by the animal units (see Table 2 in previous article) in your grazing group.

Grazing period	% Pasture	Acre/animal unit* Available pasture (lb D.M./acre)
days	utilization	750	1000	1500
1	80	0.042	0.031	0.021
2	75	0.089	0.067	0.044
3	75	0.133	0.100	0.067
4	70	0.190	0.143	0.095

6	60	0.333	0.250	0.167

* One Animal Unit=feed requirements of a 1000 lb. dry cow (25 lb. DM/day)
 These are estimates of the percentage of pasture actually consumed. Utilization is usually improved as grazing pressure is increased.

Wetland Rules Will Be Enforced

LIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — Hollis D. Baker, county executive director of the Chester/Delaware County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), said farm program participants must know whether their land is highly erodible or a wetland, and must comply with the highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions to be eligible for payments and any other USDA program benefits.

She said producers will lose program benefits if they plant an agricultural crop on highly erodible land without using an approved conservation system; if they plant agricultural commodities on wetlands converted after December 23, 1985, or if they convert a wetland to make agricultural production possible after November 28, 1990.

ALFALFA CUTTING MANAGEMENT

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Penn State

Cutting management is an important tool in achieving high quality, high yields, and stand persistence. It also can be effective in reducing the impact of weed, insect, and disease pests.

Harvest schedules will depend somewhat on the quality goals of the producer. Progressive dairy farmers have recognized the economic importance of producing high quality forage and will often cut early in order to obtain greater than 20 percent crude protein, less than 30 percent acid detergent fiber, and less than 40 percent neutral detergent fiber. Such high quality forage has the potential to increase forage dry matter intake and milk production while decreasing the requirement the requirement for grain.

For high quality alfalfa, make the first cutting at mid- to full bud stage, so long as:

- Better adapted varieties with multiple pest resistance are used.
- Adequate levels of lime, phosphorus, and potassium are maintained.
- Insect pests are monitored and controlled.

Cutting pre or early bud alfalfa is not recommended because there is a higher risk of losing the stand. Also, fiber levels may be undesirably low when cut extremely early. If an alfalfa stand has been weakened by winter stress, make the first cutting at early to mid bloom stage.

Generally, summer cuttings are permitted to reach early bloom (approximately 35 days between cuttings). In Pennsylvania, the average cutting intervals between first and second cuts and second and third cuts, for producers who make four or more cuts per year, is 37 and 33 days, respectively.

In the past, it has been recommended that producers should avoid cutting alfalfa during the critical six-week period prior to the average hard frost date (generally between early September and mid-October). This should still be considered if the stand is weak because of such factors as low soil fertility, disease, or extreme climatic conditions (such as water-saturated soils). However, it has more recently been recognized that alfalfa can be cut even during this critical period as long as:

- Better adapted varieties with multiple pest resistant are used.
- Adequate levels of lime, phosphorus, and potassium are maintained.
- There are at least 45 days of regrowth prior to cutting.

If harvests are delayed until mid-October, leave a 4- to 6-inch stubble to protect the crown and to catch snow for added insulation over winter unless the stand is to be plowed down the following spring.

Harvest schedules for alfalfa-grass mixtures should be based on the growth stage of the alfalfa as it relates to the species of grass used in the mix. Because orchardgrass, perennial ryegrass, reed canarygrass, and tall fescue can tolerate more frequent cuttings without jeopardizing the grass stand, they are more compatible with frequently cut alfalfa.

Stands of timothy or smooth bromegrass mixed with alfalfa should not be cut until the grass is in the early head-emergence stage, and cannot tolerate frequently cut alfalfa; therefore, they are more compatible with less intensely managed alfalfa (three cuts or less per year).

For information on alfalfa cutting management, refer to "Agronomy Facts 7: Cutting Management of Alfalfa, Red Clover, and Birdsfoot Trefoil," available from your county cooperative extension office.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

HIGH TENSILE FENCE...THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT

Testimonial from satisfied customer

The Beaver Fence Systems are tops! We installed 1 mile of their fence on our farm on Feb. 3, 1993, full size post, 3-1/2 feet deep, excellent braces. We used 5 strand (2 elec.) high tensil, all in place in just 8-1/2 hours! The fence is as straight as an arrow-excellent equipment-very efficient work!

"I am a hard man to convince, but after I saw how Beaver built the fence, I'm ready to put my digging iron away," says David W. Brubaker of Honey Grove Acres, RD1, Box 629 Honey Grove, PA 17035

Gubernatorial Candidate Proposes Dividing DER

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Announced Republican gubernatorial candidate Tom Ridge has called for the division of the state Department of Environmental Resources into two distinct cabinet-level agencies.

Ridge has been touring the state in recent weeks visiting local GOP party members drumming up support and attempting to increase his name recognition — some political pundits have referred to him as the "most well-known unknown" candidate.

Ridge will apparently be going up against a field of candidates for the job that Gov. Robert Casey is no longer eligible to hold, having served two terms.

Last week, prior to a golf-outing fundraising event at a Lebanon public golf course, he stopped in Myerstown at the American Legion to meet with potential supporters and to discuss local issues of concern.

Among the things he outlined was a government that served its constituents, a bureaucracy with a face and that had as a mission helping people solve problems.

In that light, he discussed dividing DER into two seperate entities — a Department of Environmental Protection which would be concerned with regulation and enforcement; and a Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, which would be concerned with the maintainance of the state park system and state forests.

Additionally, he said that a new attitude must be developed in order to change the role of DER from public adversary to public partner.

During a Tuesday telephone interview from his Washington D.C. office, Ridge said what his proposal means for agriculture in Pennsylvania is what it would mean for other businesses and industry: DER would not cease to monitor the health of the state's environmental resources, but it would be more cooperative in finding solutions instead of merely decreeing an activity illegal.

The specifics of his proposal are not worked out — the logistics, transition and implementation of a plan to dismantle perhaps the largest state agency in terms of responsibilities and to put into place effective sibling agencies.

However, the concept of splitting up DER has received much support from various sectors of the community, including some previous DER secretaries.

Projected effects are equally conceptual.

However, several people who met Ridge have commented on his political abilities and strength in speachmaking and in gaining supporters.

U.S. Congressman Tom Ridge meets with Lebanon County people as part of his effort to gain recognition outside of his home area in his bid for state governor in 1994.

On Tuesday, Ridge said he is still forming a full platform and is relying on input from people he meets as he wends his way across the state, from county to county.

"First of all, as I go about preparing my road map for Pennsylvania's future, and prepare to display my vision, (I hold) that agriculture and rural economic development have a really high priority."

The Congressional district which Ridge currently represents as a sixth term U.S. congressman is considered primarily rural with some urban areas and includes Erie, Crawford, Mercer and part of Lawrence counties.

Ridge said that representing his home area has presented him with many opportunities to learn more about issues which are widespread, ranging from urban problems to rural problems.

"I have a very diverse district. I've had to learn as much about steel imports as much as dairy price supports."

He also said that he understands urban health care issues, but he also understands that "rural communities have the same needs, but may have to address (those needs) differently.

"For someone from a very diverse district with a heavy rural population, I've just have had experience working farm families and rural people for 11 years.

According to Ridge, he has been on a "journey to know Pennsylvania" before he announced his intent to seek the governorship. "I started a personal journey, privately, a long time ago."

Over the past months, he has been forming an agricultural coalition, headed by Dennis Grumbine, of Myerstown (formerly chairman of the Republican farmers for Bush campaign). Grumbine has also served for a number of years as a state Farm Show commissioner and has been involved in local and state agricultural leadership.

Ridge said he is seeking help from the agricultural community

ASCS Announces Rates

LIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — Loan and purchase rates for Chester and Delaware County's 1993 corn, grain sorghum, and soybean crops were recently announced by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

In Chester County, the rates are $1.91 per bushel for corn, $2.96 per hundredweight for sorghum, and $5.12 per bushel for soybeans. In Delaware County, the rates are $1.92 per bushel for corn, $2.96 per hundredweight for sorghum, and $5.12 per bushel for soybeans.

ASCS official Hollis D. Baker said the loan rates reflect changes in the national average price support rates for the crops, as well as adjustments for location and transportation costs. "These adjustments were limited to a three percent change except for soybeans, in addition to the change in the price support rate for these crops."

Price support loans provide operating capital for farmers, enabling them to hold their crop off the market and benefit from price increases that often come after harvest.

Copies of the loan and purchase rates may be obtained from the Chester/Delaware County ASCS office, or by writing to the Cotton, Grain and Rice Price Support Division, USDA-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013.

Tough tillage conditions have met their MAX

Terra-Max penetrates deep and saves residue.

Above: Double shank rows on Terra Max II mean maximum soil conditioning
Terra Max I works with lower horsepower requirements

The double-shank Terra-Max II and the single-shank Terra-Max I fracture even the hardest soil for compaction-fighting aeration, maximum root penetration, moisture permeation, and seedbed preparation. Residue remains virtually intact to minimize water and wind erosion.

Adjustable, 20" spring-loaded coulters slice the residue. Next, Worksaver's unique heat-treated steel, helical shanks shatter hardpan as deep as 20".

Finally, an optional roller/conditioner breaks up clumps, works residue into the ground, and levels the seedbed. Secondary tillage usually is unnecessary.

Individual shank rows adjust to popular row widths. One person can easily adjust the gauges to regulate the working depth.

to bring to light specific issues, ideas and solutions to help turn the state into an attractive place to conduct business.

He said that there is no reason that business and environmental protections can't coexist.

According to Ridge, he has also been to Penn State University to better understand its operations and needs; he has met and intends to continue to meet with farm families about wetlands issues and has helped to sponsor legislation (H.R. 1330) which would redefine wetlands and provide compensation for denial of use of wetlands; and he said he has worked with the Rural Electric Coaltion.

He also said, if elected governor, he "will have a very strong, pro-active department of agriculture" that would intensify existing efforts to increase and expand the export of agricultural products, raw and processed.

"I appreciate the diversity and strength (of Pennsylvania agriculture) and the economic impact in Pennsylvania, and as the campaign develops, we will have a very targeted message to our friends in agriculture and rural communities," he said.

Ridge is to be back in the area again several times over the course of the next year, he said. He is to be at a picnic in Lancaster August 13 at the Lancaster Community Park for a $7.50 per person, picnic, with food and beverages provided.

He is also looking at visiting the area several other times, thought details are not firmed.

6. Better Performance! This isn't just talk. Ask your feed company to show you records from a Big Dutchman system to compare to a competitive system.
7. Big Dutchman high lip feed trough is designed to reduce spillage into the walkways. Look at a competitors walkway and measure the thickness of wasted feed.
8. Your old hoppers aren't wore out. Save money and reuse them on your new system.

Planning, Direction Needed For Successful Milk Marketing

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Self-direction and solid planning are needed strategies for dairy industry success, said two leaders from Milk Marketing Inc. at its midyear delegate meeting, July 14. The Columbus, Ohio meeting was held on the Ohio State University campus.

Two keys to these strategies are keeping dairy promotions active and working with Congress to develop "self-help" government dairy programs, explained Herman Brubaker, MMI president of the board and dairy producer from West Alexandria, Ohio.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is asking dairy producers across the country to vote, once again, on the continuation of the National Dairy Board.

"A solution that has worked for the past eight years is the advertising and promotional activities of the National Dairy Board and our regional promotion programs," said Brubaker. "From the start of this 1983 program, dairy product sales have increased nearly 5 percent. Definitely, a success."

The MMI board of directors has bloc voted on behalf of its membership in support of the National Dairy Board's continuation. Through this program, reinforced by producer vote again in 1985, 15 cents for each 100 pounds of milk marketed goes into a national advertising and promotion fund. This fund now generates more than $200 million a year.

"We knew that government support for our industry was dwindling; we could read the signs along the roadside and they said 'helping yourself was not only the best solution, but possibly the only solution,'" Brubaker told the delegates and guests. "Dairy producers could easily see that if they did not take action to reduce this surplus, the government would take action not to the liking of most producers."

Another self-help solution offered by Brubaker called for the creation of a National Dairy Stabilization Board to help decrease or control the mounting milk surplus. This board, funded by milk producers, involves four "triggers" for funding. If milk production would climb, assessments to dairy producers would increase by predetermined production schedules.

"Contact your congressional members and ask for their support to include this legislation as part of the deficit reduction bill that the House and Senate conferees will produce before adjourning in August," said Brubaker. "We don't have much time."

MMI's business future has everything to do with cooperation, planning and partnering on all fronts — from production to procurement to processing, said Don Schriver, MMI's chief executive officer. Cooperation is especially important during this unprecedented cycle of surplus milk supplies and low Class I demand, he explained.

"Right now dairy farmers are feeling the type of price disruption that occurs when farmers refuse to work together," noted Schriver. "But very recently producers who don't have the cooperative market guarantee that co-op members have are looking at those privileges with a better understanding."

Enhancing Class I market share is one of MMI's ongoing goals, said Schriver. He explained the present surplus and tightening demand for Class I milk.

"This creates a new environment that calls for co-ops, farmers and processors to cooperate," he said. (Class I milk is used for bottled milk and receives a higher price than milk used in other dairy products.)

Schriver cited developments within the MMI region where producers were notified that their milk no longer had a home.

"The reality is that if MMI had all the milk marketed in Federal Orders 33, 36, 46 and 49, almost half of it would still be Class II and Class III," said Schriver. "That means that even though MMI markets more than 10 million pounds of milk every day, seven days a week, we must work harder to secure a larger share of the Class I milk sales."

Schriver also welcomed the board members of the Huntington interstate Milk Producers Association who, in a recent letter to their members, recommended that their 500 dairy producers join MMI. Huntingdon's board recently approved a recommendation that it dissolve its cooperative organization.

Adding value to member milk through the manufacturing operations of Farmers Dairy Foods Inc., MMI's wholly-owned subsidiary is also an important step to realizing MMI's vision. Schriver said that the partnering process established with MMI and DMV USA has been a success. (In December 1992, MMI announced an international alliance with DMV USA, a division of the Dutch cooperative Campina Melkunie.)

"What all this means to MMI members is that they must do their share to support MMI's vision," said Schriver. "And that means members must stay involved, expect the unexpected, and control what they can. Primary to the overall effort is the production of high quality and nutritious milk."

With less milk manufacturing facilities in the marketplace, there are fewer homes for milk, reported Rod Carlson, MMI director of member service and marketing, and that makes market security a real issue for many producers. MMI, because of its cooperative methods of marketing, guarantees its members a market for their milk.

"If it had not been for those with enough vision to develop the cooperative way of doing business," said Carlson, "a lot more farmers would be without a market for their milk today."

This summer of heavy rains and this past spring of hot, humid weather will make the marketing process that much more difficult, said Carlson.

To deal with these marketing conditions, a committee of MMI board directors, delegates and staff recommended changes in MMI's Quality Pricing Program. Their new recommended program, along with changes of certain federal order provisions, will allow dairy farmers to continue to receive higher prices for higher quality milk.

This fall Federal Orders 33, 36 and 49, through USDA, will implement its Multiple Component Pricing program whereby MMI, or other milk marketing organizations and processors, would pay farmers based on certain components of their milk. (Milk components include: protein, lactose, fat, calcium, ribo flavin and other minerals.) Farmers will continue to be paid on the volume, fat and now, because of the new program, the protein contents of their milk.

Carlson reported that dairy farmers with higher protein milk and lower Somatic Cell Counts will earn higher prices through the federal order program. Other criteria are needed also to earn the premiums. (A Somatic Cell Count is the number of white blood cells that move into the udder during a possible inflammation.)

Carlson also reported that MMI projects a $12.82 price per hundredweight on milk for 1993, a 30 to 40 cent decrease from one year ago. The price continues to fall because of increasing production and decreasing fluid sales. Carlson told the delegates that the dairy industry continues to see farmer sellouts at a rate of 5 to 10 percent per year. At the same time, milk production per cow has increased.

"It's those same people with vision, who invested in facilities to put milk into storable commodities and sell later, that ensure themselves a market," said Carlson. The financial investment of cooperative members to have the foresight to build these values — paid through their capital retains — builds on the success of the program, explained Carlson.

MMI is a 5,500-member dairy farmer-owned cooperative encompassing an eight-state Midwestern area including Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, West Virginia, Michigan and Maryland. Last year MMI marketed more than 3.9 billion pounds or 453 million gallons of milk.

Ram Sale, Sheep Field Day Set

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association will hold their annual Performance Ram Sale and Sheep Field Day, Friday, August 6 and Saturday, August 7, in the Agricultural Arena at Pennsylvania State University. The events begin noon on Friday and run through evening on Saturday.

Prior to the Performance Ram Sale, rams from across Pennsylvania are collected at Penn State University, where they undergo a variety of testing and feeding programs to determine their rate of performance for lamb, meat, and wool production. The rams are graded by a set of standards and are offered for sale to the public.

The Sheep Field Day will showcase a variety of activities featuring sheep and wool. Related industry representatives such as animal nutritionists, dog law enforcement officers, veterinarians, sheep and lamb marketing program board members, and experts on pasture and pasture management will be available.

In addition, there will be handspinning and weaving demonstrations by the Hill & Hollow Handspinners, plus sheep guard days and herding dogs for just about any sheep flock size. A representative from the Waterside Woolen Mills will be available for discussions of wool processing.

Savory lamb dishes will greet the visitors with other delicious treats available for purchase.

Event organizers include Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers President Joseph R. Vogel, Kempton, PA; John Courtney, Mercer, vice president; Pam Bryan, Shelocta, secretary; Ed Graham, Greensburg, treasurer; and Dr. Clair Engle, Pennsylvania State University.

Representative counties in these activities will be Bedford, Berks, Bradford, Buck/Montgomery, Butler, Centre, Cumberland, Greene, Indiana, Lancaster, Lawrence, Mercer, Northumberland, Northwest, Somerset, Sullivan, Tioga/Potter, Washington, Wayne, Westmoreland, Wyoming, and York.

The Performance Ram Sale and Sheep Field Day are events open to the public. For more information, contact Joseph R. Vogel, (215) 756-4212 or Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, (814) 238-2527.

Burdette Speaks At Holstein Club Picnic

BLAIN (Perry Co.) — Jim Burdette, owner of Windy Knoll View Farm, was the featured speaker at the annual Perry County Holstein Club summer picnic.

Burdette, who farms near Mercersburg, spoke first of his family, wife Nina, and their two sons Justin and Kyle, and the important role each one has in his life and success of the dairy operation.

Burdette's operation is known internationally for breeding industry elite Holstein cattle. In reviewing the success of his 18 years in the dairy industry, Burdette mentioned the early year's when Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation did so much to improve his foundation herd.

From those early days to the present time, 30 excellent cows have been bred by Burdette, one of the most significant being the 94 point, 2E Windy Knoll View Ultimate Pala. This cow is not only well known in the industry, but continues to strengthen the Windy Knoll View herd by the addition of daughters.

Four daughters currently milking include 88-point and 91-point Melvin daughters. The 91-point cow gained All-American honors as a calf. An 89-point Pala daughter from Astrojet is currently in the herd as is a 92-point Valiant daughter from Pala, making a 37,000-pound record.

Burdette reviewed some of his successful embryo transfer work and overseas marketing, and concluded with an affirmation of the registered Holstein business, even in the current economic situation.

As part of the evening's activities, Club President Ben Dum, Elliottsburg, introduced the members of the Perry County Holstein Senior Quiz Bowl Team which recently captured first place in the national competition. Marel Raub, Perry County dairy princess, addressed the group, stressing the importance of the upcoming industry referendum on the National Dairy Board.

The picnic, sponsored by the Perry County Holstein Club, was held at the Blain Picnic Grounds.

Dairy Referendum Called

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A national order establishing a dairy promotion, research, and nutrition education program was authorized by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 and was fully implemented on May 1, 1984. The program provides for a 15 cents per hundredweight assessment on all milk produced in the United States by dairy farmers.

The secretary of agriculture has called for a referendum among producers to determine whether the Dairy Promotion and Research program should be continued. For the program to continue, a majority of the producers voting in the referendum must favor keeping the program.

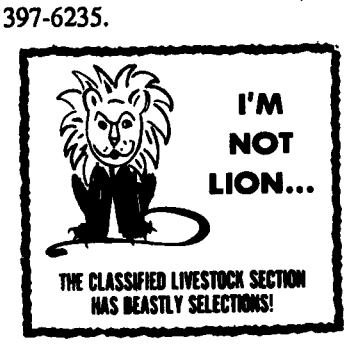
The assessment is used for researching and developing new products to increase consumption of dairy products, educating consumers about the merits of milk products and promoting dairy products nationally and locally. Some of the monies are returned to the state to help support local promotional efforts. Producers may request that 10 cents be returned to the state.

A producer engaged in the production of milk for commercial use during April 1993 is eligible to vote. In the case of a producer who is other than an individual, the business unit is regarded as the producer. Only one vote is permitted for each dairy farm business unit. A cooperative association may vote on behalf of its producer members. A producer member opposed to the cooperative's vote may cast an individual ballot.

The referendum period is August 5 through August 16. The voting will be conducted by mail and the ballots must be postmarked no later than August 16. Incomplete ballots or ballots postmarked after August 16 will not be counted.

Ballots are available at the Lancaster County ASCS Office or can be obtained by calling (800) 745-5417.

Producers with questions may call Glenn Shirk at the Lancaster extension service, (717) 394-6851, or Ray Brubaker at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, (717) 397-6235.



Livestock Notes

IMPROVING YOUR COW/CALF HERD

Scott M. Barao
Extension Livestock Specialist
U. Of Md.

Too often, beef cattle breeding plans do not receive proper emphasis. Genetic improvement is slow, and usually costs money either in the form of keeping the best animals within a herd, or purchasing a good herd sire. But genetic improvement is important, regardless of the objectives for a herd.

Naturally, purebred breeders must become involved with good recordkeeping programs. They should use these records to select male and female replacements from within their own herds or in purchasing replacements from other herds. The genetic ability of replacement cattle in a strictly commercial herd has a tremendous effect on net profit and pride of ownership. The cattle business is just like any other business; there is a better chance of a person sticking with, enjoying, and continuing to improve a business if it involves highly productive units. Cattle are like cars — each breed of cattle has different capabilities, and there are "lemons" and "performers" within each breed of cattle and each make of car. Also, there is no one breed of cattle, nor make of car, that performs every assigned task better than every other breed. There is no one breed of cattle that has the most desirable milk production, the most rapid growth rate, the highest quality carcasses, the highest bull and cow fertility levels and the easiest calving records.

Often a bull consistently sires calves weighing at least 50 pounds more than calves sired from another bull that is within the same herd, bred to the same cows, and fed and managed alike. For most commercial breeders, the weaning weight of the calf determines the gross sale price of the calf crop. The purebred breeder must be concerned about the performance (particularly weaning and 365-day weights) because it is from the purebred breeder that any further improvement in genetic ability is made to benefit the rest of the industry.

What Characteristics To Improve?

Attention in any breeding program must be focused on the following traits.

Reproductive ability is the ability of a cow or bull either to become pregnant or to cause pregnancy in females within 45 to 90 days after last calving. This trait usually cannot be improved much by selection within a breed, but is improved with crossbreeding.

Calving ease means that the bull will not be too large for the cows, and will not have coarse muscling or coarse bone. Although a breeder may consider breeding virgin heifers to a large bull, this is not recommended except in specialized, outstanding purebred herds.

Structural soundness includes straightness and correctness of feet and legs, lack of extreme muscling (particularly important in some of the larger breeds), femininity in females, masculinity in males, size and condition of the testicles, teat size and shape in producing females, and straightness and balance indicating an animal will be a longtime producer. In the past, cattle producers have overemphasized some unimportant components of appearance; however, some appearance items still reflect an animal's productivity.

Calf weaning weight reflects a cow's ability to milk and to mother, as well as the inherent growth rate of the calf. Specialized programs involving beef-dairy crossbred cows will produce relatively large quantities of milk, and using large breeds of sire can bring about large increases in weaning weight.

Yearling weight indicates the ability of the calf to grow rapidly and efficiently before and after weaning. This trait is of high heritability, which means that selection of breeding stock on yearling weight will bring about relatively rapid progress.

Any product produced must be sold, although almost any type of beef produced in the past has had a market. Generally, carcasses of higher quality grades bring more money when sold. However, if too much fat is required to reach a high grade and this fat requires a large amount of feed, then it is debatable whether producing this type of carcass is economical for either the commercial cow-calf operator or the cattle feeder. Over recent years, the demand for quality carcasses with lesser amounts of waste fat has increased.

Using Performance Records To Select Replacements

Many purebred breeders obtain accurate performance records on the cattle they produce. These records should be used to decide which animals within a herd are to be purchased or kept as replacement bulls or females. In Table 1, weights at weaning time and at about age 1 year were adjusted for age of the animal and age of the dam. These adjusted yearling and weaning weights are listed for six bulls born within the same herd during the same season, and fed the same ration from weaning until age 1 year. The adjusted weaning and yearling weights of each of the six bulls are given. In addition, there is a ratio for weaning and yearling weights on each bull. These ratios compare each individual animal with the average of all six bulls. As an example, the weaning weight for bull number 4 was 92 percent of the average of all six bulls (538 pounds). The yearling weight on bull number 4 was only 93 percent of the average yearling weight for all six bulls. Therefore, he would not be a good bull to consider for a breeding program of any type.

On the other hand, bull number 5 had a weaning weight ratio of 112 percent and a yearling weight ratio of 112 percent. He was 12 percent above the average weaning and yearling weights for all six bulls. Heritability estimates of growth tell us that he should pass on 1/3 to 1/2 of this 12 percent superiority to the calves that he sires in a herd.

Performance ratios allow more accurate comparison of two or more animals raised in different herds. Actual or adjusted weaning or yearling weights should not be used to compare animals from different herds because of the wide variety of feeding and management conditions between herds. However, an animal that has a high weight ratio in one herd will most likely have a high weight ratio if raised in a different herd.

Records on the cow herd become even more useful after several years of recordkeeping, since the lifetime production of cows and bulls in the herd can be used to cull cows and compare bulls, and to provide additional information to decide which heifer calves should be kept for herd replacement. Performance records are information obtained when the animal is maturing (usually up to age 1 year), but production of progeny records are the "acid-test" of the animal's actual value based on the performance of his or her offspring.

Purebreeding Systems

Commercial Herds. Although the advantages of crossbreeding have been established, many commercial, relatively small herds will remain purebred. Some breeds are relatively acceptable in their performance for each of several different economically important traits. As an example, there will remain many straightbred Angus and Hereford cow herds. These two breeds and Shorthorn and some continental breeds have an acceptable level of fertility, have a desirable milk production level, will reach an acceptable carcass grade without a high level of grain finishing, and have other traits that make them desirable as staightbred animals.

Commercial producers with straightbred cattle usually should not consider keeping bulls from their herds. Neither should they follow line-breeding or inbreeding programs, because inbreeding, or mating of animals closely related, usually decreases performance. It usually is best for commercial producers to continually use bulls from different blood lines or from different breeders. Straight breeding for the commercial herd is simple. As long as commercial producers have breeds of cattle that are popular within their own areas, it is an easy matter to obtain herd sires of that breed and even to purchase replacement heifers.

Secretary Wolff Calls For Potato Assessment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff is urging potato growers to vote in favor of a proposed amendment to change the rate of assessment for the Pennsylvania Potato Research Program.

"Our growers produced over $34 million in potatoes last year," Wolff said. "Potatoes are important to Pennsylvania agriculture, and research will help them to be competitive in the market place."

If the proposed amendment is approved, producers who plant five acres or more of potatoes will be assessed $4 for each acre of potatoes planted for sale. The current assessment is 2 cents per hundredweight of potatoes.

All producers who plant five or more acres of potatoes for sale within the commonwealth are eligible to vote. A producer is defined as a person who produces, grows, or causes to be produced potatoes in the commonwealth.

The referendum period will begin on August 2, 1993 and end on August 16, 1993. Counting of the ballots will begin at 10 a.m. Friday, August 20, 1993, in the State Agriculture Building in Harrisburg, PA.

For more information about the potato referendum, contact Brenda Beleski Briggs, Bureau of Market Development, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

The CLAAS corn header is in a class of its own, and sets the standard for the industry.

The six row header features folding outer dividers so you stay within 10 foot width. This makes road travel safer standard.

The dividers have a very low profile to ensure that hanging or battered corn can be picked up cleanly and transported smoothly to the compression rollers. The deflectors stop the header from pushing the corn forward and allows cutting of the crop close to the ground.

BAUER

Comprehensive tests on the retraction speed regularity of irrigation machines were carried out by the French Chamber of Agriculture.

In field tests on farms, irrigation machines of 19 different manufacturers were tested. The BEST results were reached by BAUER Rainstars with Ti Turbine Drive.

100% of the tests showed optimum retraction speed regularity with only 6 psi loss. Uniformity along the irrigation strip is directly dependent on retraction speed regularity. The results of variations found in other makes will mean considerable losses in terms of yields, water and energy consumption.

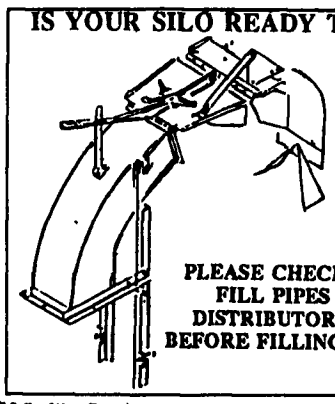
ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

Families Make Dairy Of Distinction Farms Beautiful

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.)—The Wilkinsons at Gettysburg in Adams County are representative of the many closely knit families who own and operate beautiful dairy farms that have been designated in the Dairy of Distinction program. For Larry and Doris Wilkinson, farming not only means farming 2200 acres known as Getty Acres and working with a 450 head Holstein dairy herd, it means having the grandchildren nearby to follow grandpa around or go swimming in farm pool with grandma.

Besides the dairy, steers are raised, a large-bale custom hay business is operated and even Caribbean cruises are booked from the farm kitchen. In the photo background, the distant farm houses the dairy herd where 210 cows are milked in a rotary parlor. The farm on the left is home and has an extensive farm shop and room for dry cows and heifers. Family members are, left inset, Earl, who toured the Middle East with the U.S Navy and expects to return there in early August but was back in the states for a month at the time of this farm visit. Around the Wilkinson stone trademark are from left, Tina, Ed, and children, Carl, 6; Lee, 7, and Holly, 1; Doris and Larry; Debbie; Laurel Sentz and Dan.

In all, 49 new designations of Dairy of Distinction were made across Pennsylvania. Including this year's winners, 522 of the state's dairy farms have won the award since 1986 when the program started.

The program was established in New York State in 1983 with one also in place in New Jersey too. The program was developed to recognize farms which maintain a high quality farm appearance, and many of the owners of winning farms use the designation as an attraction to their farm by urban neighbors or as a sales tool to attract farm labor.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings. The winning farms receive attractive 18-inch X 24-inch signs from the program for exhibition at roadside and 11-inch X 14-inch color photographs for framing from Lancaster Farming. Winning entries are automatically judged annually to insure that they continue to meet the standards of excellence set by the program.

Stan-El Jersey Farm, owned by Elva Koontz and son Wayne, has been in the family for four generations. They have 250 cows and farm 525 acres. The farm includes a modern parlor with computer feeders and a computer in the office. A covered manure storage system that empties by gravity has been a good investment. The farm is located 15 miles south of Bedford on Rt. 326.

1993 Dairy Of Distinction Farm Photographs

BUCKS

Howe Farm

Jesse Howe, who operates a small (23-acre, none tillable) dairy in Ottsville, Bucks County, admits that he went to the entirely pasture-based dairy farm because it would have been "nearly impossible," he said, to do otherwise. "No doubt about it," said Jesse, "grazing works." With the climbing costs of securing equipment and livestock, after his graduation from Penn State with an agronomy degree in 1986, he chose to take up the grass-based and seasonal grazing dairy farm because of the low cost. Jesse and wife Michelle, together with children Richard, 8 and Eveyln, 2, own 15 and lease an additional 15 Holstein cows (some registered, some grade) with several replacement stock, Holstein Dutch Belt. They milk from tie stall to pipeline with a herd average of 15,000 pounds. The Howes began farming about three years ago on a farm that is about 100 years old.

CAMBRIA

Lieb Farm

Herman and Rose Marie and Ralph and Mary Beth Lieb farm their Dairy of Distinction in Cambria County. Their 250 acres are planted in corn, alfalfa, and grass hay. The herd consists of 150 Holsteins with 55 milk cows that average 20,400 lbs. of milk. The farm was purchased in 1861, and the grandchildren are the sixth generation on the farm. Ralph and Mary Beth's children are: Bob, Marie, Marty, Aaron, and Ben.

FROM MASTER MIX®
AT A DEALER NEAR YOU.

AminoTek™ feeds are a blend of high-quality proteins which have complementary amino acid profiles. The AminoTek patented process is then applied to this blend, resulting in significantly increased levels of absorbable bypass protein and amino acids.

Central Soya research shows that cows fed AminoTek had a summit peak which was over 8 pounds higher than the peak of cows fed conventional protein feeds. Besides the obvious economic advantage which comes from increased milk production, other economic advantages may include improved milk composition and breeding performance.

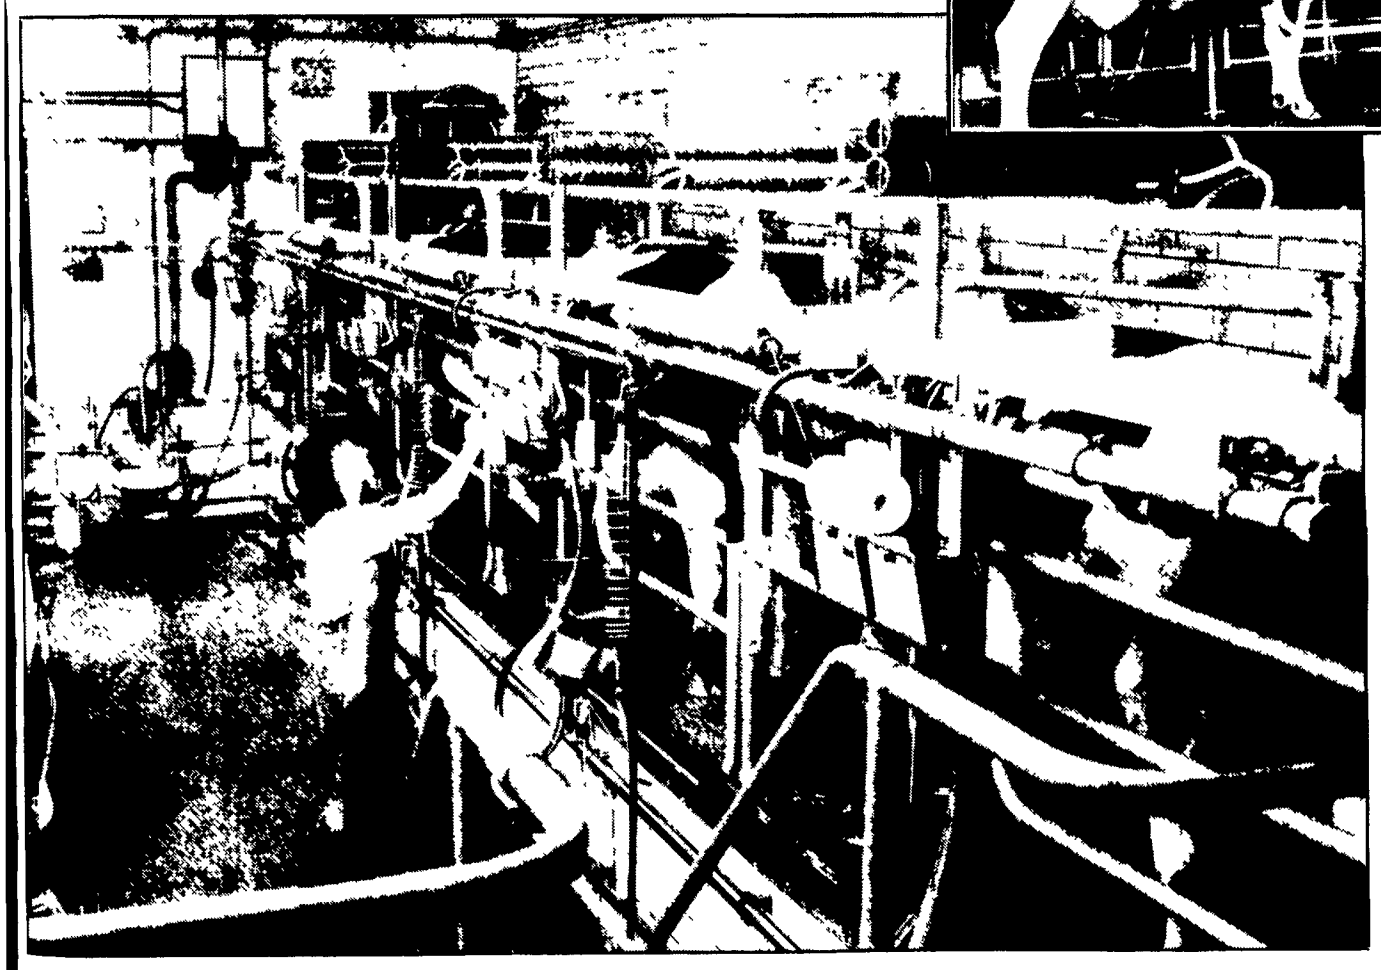
WESTFALIA
SYSTEMAT

Key to efficient milking and high milking yield is a stress-free, operator-friendly milking environment. Thanks to newly developed technology, that system is now available. Westfalia's AUTOTANDEM Parlor is the most high-tech system available on the market today, yet it's so simple to use, it can be operated by just one person. Compared to traditional stall configurations, the AUTOTANDEM Parlor can increase milking efficiency by as much as 40% or more per stall!

Your cows receive individualized attention with the AUTOTANDEM System. Each cow has her own stall, and freely moves in and out of it without bothering or slowing up the others. The operator always has a more complete view of the entire cow.

With the AUTOTANDEM, you'll milk more cows per stall per operator per hour. One person alone can handle a double 5 AUTOTANDEM System, milking 80-85 cows per hour. Think about it—eight cows per hour, per stall. Now . . . that's efficient!



7 Reasons Why Westfalia's AUTOTANDEM is the Most Efficient and User-Friendly System Available:

1. Smooth, Stress-Free Milking
   Slow or high producing cows no longer control how long cows will remain in the parlor. Each cow milks at her own rate and leaves when finished.
2. Less Stress During Letdown
   In her own milking stall, each cow can concentrate on milking without interruption. Nervous cows or cows in heat do not interfere with any others.
3. Individual Attention
   Cows stand in the stall lengthwise, fully visible to the operator who can detect health problems and better manage the milking routine.
4. High Hourly Throughput
   Compared to other milking configurations, the AUTOTANDEM can increase efficiency by as much as 40%!
5. Fewer Milking Places
   In group parlors, one cow can slow down the entire operation. With the AUTOTANDEM, milking proceeds regardless of any cow s pace. So fewer milking places are needed.
6. Excellent Working Conditions
   With the udder right in front of you, it s easier to attach the milker. And the stimulating pulsator reduces your preparation workload for you.
7. Cost-Effective Modernization
   With the reduced number of stalls and high-tech equipment needed with AUTOTANDEM, you'll save money.

Master Farmer Now Has Dairy Of Distinction

Beth Miller
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

NEWVILLE (Cumberland Co.) — Richard G. Mains has won many prestigious farming awards over the years and now he has another honor to add to that list.

His farms in West Pennsboro and Penn Townships have been picked for the coveted Dairy of Distinction honor.

Mains, who runs the six farms in his operation in partnership with his son, Richard Jr., is proof of what hard work and intelligent planning can bring.

Mains showed his talent for farming early when he enrolled in the two-year Agriculture Management Program at Penn State University after graduating from Carlisle High School in 1954. He finished the course in one and one-half years.

After finishing at Penn State in 1956, Mains' father, Norman, who is 86 and still walks to the farms every morning, offered him a three-way partnership with his brother.

His career with the farms, which all touch, grew from there.

"All our equipment is bought and paid for. A lot of people can't start up in small farms because it costs a lot to start up," Mains said. "You can make good money because of the high prices, but if things get bad you fall big."

By 1970, the Mains' were milking one of the biggest herds in the county. Mains in fact started milking in one of the first parlors in the area. They still are milking in a parlor they built 23 years ago.

Their herd average production has risen from 12,000 pounds in 1970 to an average of 19,000 pounds today, Mains said.

Mains owns 750 acres and rents another 200. The main farm has been in the Mains family since 1832. The original farmhouse was involved in the Civil War when Conferate soldiers stayed there on their way to Carlisle, and the famous Battle of Gettysburg, Mains said.

The Mains' milk 150 cows and raise 200 young cattle for replacements. They employ one hired man full-time to help with the operation.

They grow most of the feed for the cattle - corn, alfalfa, wheat, barley and soybeans. Mains said they roast their soybeans.

The Mains' sell the corn they don't use and they sell wheat also.

They have no plans to expand their operation at present, Mains said.

The Dairy of Distinction honor is just one of the awards Mains has won for his expertice in farming.

Richard Mains with calves that will keep his Dairy of Distinction operation going in the future.

Another major honor was awarded to him in 1991 when the Pennsylvania Farmers Association bestowed the Master Farmer Award on him. His own father had won the same coveted award in 1969.

Richard Jr. also seems to be following in his father's footsteps since, like his dad, he also is a graduate of the agriculture course at Penn State. Two of Mains' three daughters are in farming also.

Richard Sr. is active in farming beyond the boundaries of his own farms as well.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Board and a state director in the Pennsylvania Farmers Association. In addition, he is promoting agriculture security areas in the townships where his farms are located.

Mains said he is trying to sign easements to preserve all the farms for farming use. So far, two farms are signed in, he said.

His other activities include being a session member of the First United Presbyterian Church for 15 years.

Mains said he and his wife, Shelby, try to travel in the winter. They have managed to make it to 40 of the 50 states so far, he said.

Mains said his operation also includes one of the area's most colorful landmarks, the "reddest barn in the county."

The barn ended up being painted a Chinese red, he said, because Richard Jr. kept teasing him about all the buildings on the operation being painted white with green trim.

So Richard Sr. said he started calling around, saying he would paint the barn the brightest red he could find. He did, a very bright red.

"It's an eye-catcher," Mains said. "A lot of people drive by and take pictures."

President Baker's Message

Since the Dairy of Distinction program began in 1987, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, hundreds of dairy farmers have applied to have their farms recognized as a "Dairy of Distinction".

Those attractive farms that were honored to receive the colorful farm sign are truly an advertisement for their industry not only to their neighbors, but to those who pass their farms. This is the purpose of the program: to be a point of pride in promoting the source of the state beverage — milk.

However, the executive committee recognizes there are many more farms that would merit the designation if only they would submit an application to the program. Also, there are those farms that entered in the past that have truly improved the appearance of their farms and would now qualify. But no one else can enter for you. Mr., Mrs., or Ms. Dairy farmer, this is a self nominating program. Only you can take the initiative to complete the application and send it in. We encourage you to participate in 1994.

It will make us all proud to see more farms strive to become a "Dairy of Distinction."

Thank you again to all our hard-working volunteers on the commitees for making the program successful the past seven years.

Dan Baker
President, Pennsylvania
Dairy of Distinction Program

EDITOR'S NOTE: 1994 application forms for Dairy of Distinction will be available after January 1, 1994. Forms are distributed by American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 239 Schuyler Avenue STE 105, Kingston, PA 18704-3329. And will also be printed in various farm newspapers.

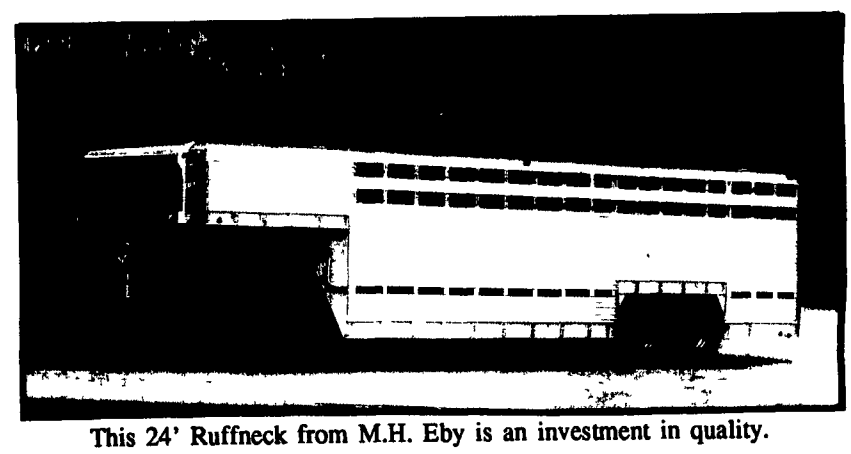
EBY LIVESTOCK TRAILERS



This 24' Ruffneck from M.H. Eby is an investment in quality.

Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program

Congratulations Dairy of Distinction Award Winners

A new aluminum trailer, like this one from M.H. Eby, Inc., looks bright and clean when it comes from the factory. The surprising thing is it stays bright and clean for years — with very little maintenance.

Aluminum offers another big advantage over conventional wood and steel trailer construction. It's lighter — as much as 35% lighter.

Eby trailers are designed strong and built tough. Each trailer is custom made to your specifications.

Proof of durability for Eby trailers is their resale value. At five years old, many sell for as much as 90% of their original price.

Please call or write for more information and the name of the dealer nearest you.

SUSQUEHANNA

Swetter Farm

James and Patricia Swetter, Sr., farm 560 acres that have been in the family for 50 years. They milk 61 Holsteins that average over 20,000 lbs. of milk and have an additional 70 head of young stock. They also raise buffalo and horses. The farm is located in Susquehanna County at the base of Elk Mountain ski center. Their children are Stephanie, 21; James Jr., 18; Braddley, 11, and Brentt, 10.

Lauer Farm

David and Lorraine Lauer Sr., and David, Jr., farm 208 acres in Susquehanna County. They milk 60 Holstein cows that average between 50 and 60 lbs. of milk per day but keep no young stock. They buy close springing cows and milk them until they are dry and then replace them with other fresh cows. They milk in a comfort stall barn with a pipeline milker and use rotational grazing of pasture for summer feed. David said this use of pasture saves energy and time for harvesting crops, but you need to fertilize, clip and take good care of the pasture. The farm has been in the family 25 years.

Harvatine Farm

Brothers Carl and Paul Harvatine, along with another brother, Anthony, who works part-time on the farm, have 150 head of Holsteins with 80 to 90 milk cows that average nearly 22,000 lbs. of milk. They live near Elk Mountin Ski Center so the family has been active in a 4-H ski club. Carl and his wife Nancy have three children: Laura, graduating from Penn State; Dana, a freshman at Cornell, and David, a sophomore in high school. Paul and Susan also have three children: Joshua, a freshman at Penn State; Will, a senior in high school and Kevin in ninth grade. The farm has been in the family since 1940.
